'TRAPPED IN PLANNING'

Big Works Push Stressed by PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau today urged provincial premiers to push ahead quickly on major public construction projects to create jobs.

"I cannot help feeling that too many projects have been trapped in the planning stages for too long," Trudeau said as he kicked off discussions on industrial development at the second day of a three-day economic conference with the 10 provincial leaders.

Trudeau said that Canada had been able to reach agreement in a few weeks with the United States on construction of a $12-billion natural gas pipeline to move Alaskan gas to U.S. markets.

Yet there still had been no agreement with the provinces on several critical job-generating projects. He cited the need for improved grain handling systems—ranging from better railways to more efficient ports — and energy projects such as the proposed natural gas pipeline from Montreal to Eastern Quebec and the Maritimes.

He said that although all governments agreed their spending must be restrained, it was important to recognize these major capital projects would require significant government financial involvement.

Trudeau said that he would expect the private sector to take the lead in producing major new projects but "initiatives such as these will require (government) funding and support."

He said government spending in the construction of ports, highways, railways, and energy projects had contributed to the economic prosperity of the country. The government had to continue this role.

Trudeau's call for agreement on major new capital projects, which create jobs in the short term and contribute to overall economic growth in the long term, coincided with the position of Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney at the conference Monday.

Blakeney did not name specific projects but said governments should take the lead in energy development and major construction programs.

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque said it was one thing for Trudeau to talk about the need for federal initiatives for major developments. But he said provincial priorities must be respected.

Monday, the government leaders found themselves split along regional and ideological lines over the question of whether the government should step into areas where the private sector was unable or unwilling to act.

Blakeney, for example, pushed the government leaders to "take the lead in moving ahead rapidly and massively with capital projects" in the energy field.

British Columbia's Willian Bennett and Sterling Lyon of Manitoba objected to Ottawa backing the Crown-owned Petro Canada's takeover of Pacific Petroleum.

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque was skeptical about joint economic action between his government and the federal government, saying, "it just isn't working."

He hinted the federal government is deliberately trying to undermine his government's attempts at economic recovery, and presented a list

Still Uphill Struggle

OTTAWA (CP) — As top federal and provincial leaders Monday began their three-day economic meeting, two government agencies, Statistics Canada and the Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity, released reports that showed the economy still faces an uphill struggle in the post-wage-and-price-controls period.

Statistics Canada figures showed the rate of growth in the economy for the third quarter of the year as only 3.6 per cent on an annual basis.

This compared with growth at a 4.4 per cent rate in the second quarter and 2.8 per cent in the first quarter. It prompted Robert Andras, head of the newly-created cabinet board of economic ministers, to concede that the reduced government projection of four per cent growth this year would not be met.

Minutes before the figures were released, Chretien had told the conference that "this year, the growth rate looks at best as being only about four per cent."

The government had earlier predicted that growth in the economy, as measured by

Lougheed Admits Free Air Passes

EDMONTON (CP) — Revenue Canada has begun an investigation into free airline passes given to Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, a department spokesman said Tuesday.

Milton Barth, a public relations officer for the department's Edmonton bureau, said his office will investigate whether the free flights given to Lougheed by CP Air are taxable income.

Lougheed said earlier Tuesday in a telephone interview from Ottawa he didn't expect any problems with the tax department.

"There are passes given to people all the time on airlines," Lougheed said. "I wouldn't think that in any way there's any liability of that nature."

Lougheed said he accepted free trips from the airline because he believed Albertans would want him to take holidays and relax from the demands of office.

"It was offered to me as the premier of Alberta.

"And I felt from the standpoint of the citizens of Alberta that they would want me whenever I could to get a decent break in the hope that I would get the rest to do a better job."

Lougheed said he and his wife, Jean, flew to and from Hawaii Nov. 3 to 15 courtesy of CP Air.

The cost of the return fares would have been $942 economy class or $1,364 first class.

As premier, Lougheed receives a salary of $32,373 plus an extra cash indemnity of $16,185 for each legislative session.

Lougheed has been criticized heavily by opposition leaders for accepting the free rides.

Lougheed said he would have no objections if members of his cabinet and senior government employees accepted similar airline passes under similar circumstances.

The controversy comes only one month after the Alberta government faced sharp criticism in two other similar issues.

In early November, it was discovered that government-appointed directors of Pacific Western Airlines were acting on behalf of the Progressive Conservative Party as collectors of financial donations.

BRIDGES BAD BUT STAYING

Highways Minister Alex Fraser agreed Monday the Bailey bridges on the Blanshard extension have contributed to the recent rash of accidents, but said drivers are going to have to live with them.

The ministry won't install a permanent structure until the CNR application to abandon the line is resolved, and that could take as long as 12 months, Fraser said.

Since the new route to the Pat Bay Highway opened a couple of weeks ago, the intersection at Ravine Way just south of the two Bailey bridges has been the scene of several collisions.

Drivers on Ravine Way must look through a tangle of poles, signs and iron grillwork on the bridges while trying to enter the Blanshard extension.

And a number of drivers have been hit while trying to turn onto Ravine Way immediately after leaving the bridge.

Fraser said his ministry was opposed to the Baileys from the beginning but had no other choice because of the uncertainty of the rail line underneath.

Highways crews Monday began installing a raised median to prevent motorists from crossing Ravine Way which Fraser said should cut down on accidents.

Highways engineers are continuing to look for further solutions to the problem.

Socreds Got $1.5M: Dailly

An NDP MLA said today a list of lottery grants shows 32 grants worth $1.5 million went to projects in Social Credit ridings while NDP constituencies received only two grants valued at $100,000.

Burnaby North member Eileen Dailly said the breakdown proves the Socred government is using the grants as political patronage.

"This is a blatant misuse of public lottery funds to buy votes in Socred ridings," Dailly said.

She said some of the projects are obviously worthy but wondered if worthy projects only exist in Socred ridings.

The list is not complete because it does account for another $12 million in culture, health, sports, social events and heritage projects.

Dailly said a detailed breakdown of that remaining cash is now more essential than ever.

Also missing from the list is the $100,000 footbridge in the Coquitlam riding of Socred MLA George Kerster because the cheque has not yet been issued.

"So this means a total of 33 projects out of 35 in Social Credit ridings," Dailly said.

In compiling her figures Dailly excluded all grants that went to province-wide organizations such as the Salvation Army.

Premiers Balk On Oil Hike Deal

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial premiers declined today to give quick approval to an Ottawa-Alberta plan that could delay the next round of domestic oil price increases until after the expected federal election next year.

"The matter is still in the air," said Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed following a one-hour private luncheon meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau and other premiers held to discuss the oil price deal.

"We're prepared to go either way they decide," Lougheed added, referring to a deal that would cancel a scheduled Jan. 1 increase of $1 a barrel-three cents a gallon on gasoline and home-heating oil-in favor of $1 increases next July and again in January of 1980.

Premier Rene Levesque said the federal government had attempted to sell the idea of a delay with a suggestion that it would be "in the national interest."

But that, he added, "happens to look a lot like the Liberal interest."

Federal officials estimate the proposed January increase would boost the inflation rate by about seven-tenths of a percentage point. Ottawa's new proposal would delay an increase in consumer prices until September, well after any federal election which Trudeau says will

See How Your Help Is Spent

Victorians have always had big hearts and deep pockets when it comes to the annual Unitarian Service Committee appeal for funds.

Last year residents of this area contributed more than $30,000 to help USC executive director Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova and her fellow workers finance and organize self-help projects for needy people around the world.

Those donors can see Wednesday night just how valuable their dollars are in the USC's never-ending fight to combat poverty, ignorance and hunger in those underprivileged nations.

Dr. Hitschmanova is here in Victoria as part of a cross-Canada fund-raising tour and at 8 p.m. in the Georgian Lounge at the Empress Hotel, she'll present an up to-date picture of USC activities through a slide show.

San Francisco Mourns Amid Tight Security

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Security was tightened around city hall today as San Francisco mourned the assassinations of Mayor George Moscone and city supervisor Harvey Milk, shot to death Monday allegedly by a former city official who thought the mayor had double-crossed him.

(Residents also queried "Why here?" as they pondered recent bizarre and brutal happenings in the Bay city. See story on page 23.)

The suspect, former supervisor Dan White, 32, was held in isolation at San Francisco's hall of justice, charged with two counts of murder.

Extra police were assigned to the other nine members of the board of supervisors, San Francisco's legislative body, and chief administrative officer Roger Boas ordered security measures tightened in the ornate domed city hall, already protected by guards and metal detectors at its main entrances.

"There was recently a suggestion to remove that," Boas said. "Now it will have to be strengthened."

The shootings took place separately at city hall late Monday morning, just before Moscone was to announce that he had decided against reappointing White to the board of supervisors.

The youthful-looking White, an ex-policeman and fireman, had resigned just 17 days before, but then asked for his job back.

Monday night more than 30,000 mourners carrying lighted candles solemnly marched to city hall to the slow beat of three drums in a gathering organized by leaders of the city's homosexual community. Milk was an avowed homosexual and leader of San Francisco's large homosexual population.

SUSPENSION NOTICE REQUIRED

B.C. will have to amend the automatic drivers' licence suspension provision in the Motor Vehicle Act following a Supreme Court of Canada decision concerning an Alberta driver Monday.

The court upheld an Alberta Court of Appeal ruling that acquitted Garry Mudryk of driving while his licence was suspended because he had not been informed in writing of the suspension following a conviction of a drinking-driving offence.

Federal Job Applicants Probed - RCMP

TORONTO (CP) — A senior RCMP officer says that under a federal cabinet order issued in 1963, civil servants and persons who apply for federal jobs are investigated to determine their loyalty and reliability.

The order says that illicit sexual behavior can be part of investigations, Chief Supt. Michael Spooner, head of the RCMP security service in southeastern Ontario, told a royal commission Monday.

But despite this order a man once diagnosed as a manic depressive, sex pervert and pathological liar is still working for the federal government, he said.

The cabinet directive says that a person may be unreliable if he has character traits which could lead to indiscretion or dishonesty, or make him vulnerable to blackmail or coercion, he testified.

The directive says that such character traits "may be greed, debt, illicit sexual behavior, drunkenness, drug addiction, mental imbalance or such other aspect of character as might seriously affect his reliability," the chief superintendent said.

He said that if any derogatory information is obtained a file on the person is kept in Ottawa indefinitely, and reviewed every 10 years.

Spooner told the royal commission on confidentiality of health records that the man still working for the government also failed an RCMP security clearance.

"I understand he was re-assigned to another function that did not require the level of security clearance."

He said the information on the man was obtained from files of the Ontario Health Insurance Plan.

Cpl. Glen Gartshore of the RCMP spoke to Albert Board, director of the health plan's Hamilton office, before looking at the files. Claims records of all Ontario residents are kept on microfilm at the Hamilton office.

Spooner says he supports a change in security screening procedures for civil servants to prevent their medical records being examined without their consent.

Commission counsel Harvey Strosberg suggested to Spooner that applications for civil service jobs requiring security clearance include a consent form authorizing the RCMP to examine their medical and hospital records.

"I am in favor of such a consent form," said Spooner.

Tanzanian Invasion Of Uganda Reported

NAIROBI (Reuter) — Tanzania has invaded southern Uganda with a force of up to 10,000 troops, Western diplomatic sources said today.

The Tanzanians had artillery units with them and were engaged in heavy shelling attacks, the sources said.

A close aide of Ugandan President Idi Amin said Monday a brigade-size Tanzanian force had seized the border town of Mutukula and driven about 30 kilometres west of Lake Victoria into Uganda.

The diplomatic sources said they had no details on how far the Tanzanians had advanced, but said they were reported to be on the 250-kilometre paved road leading from the border to the market town of Masaka and on to the Ugandan capital, Kampala.

The sources said they had independent confirmation of the Ugandan aide's report that the Tanzanians crossed the border Monday, one day after the Tanzanian government-owned Sunday News said Tanzania did not intend to invade Uganda and overthrow Amin.

The diplomatic sources said Tanzania's objectives were not clear but they appeared to include retaliation for the Ugandan invasion of a strip of Tanzanian territory earlier this month, as well as possibly encouraging a revolt against the Ugandan military government.

In Dar es Salaam today, the government Daily News carried, without comment, a Uganda radio report on the Tanzanian invasion.

It was the first time in a month of reports of border clashes that the Tanzanian media carried a Ugandan report without denying it.

Uganda has not reported whether its own army has acted to halt the invasion.

However, diplomatic sources here said both sides appeared to be shelling each other.

Mika Wants UVic Taxed

Saanich taxpayers are out almost $1 million a year because the University of Victoria and Camosun College don't pay taxes, Ald. John Mika of Saanich said Monday.

He told the Capital Regional District's planning committee the provincial government should carry out McMath royal commission recommendations which state that such institutions should have their general, debt and Capital Regional District levies paid by the provincial government.

Even then, Mika said, the province would only be paying half of the taxes on the two properties since it would not be paying school, hospital or the assessment authority portion of taxes.

Mika said the portion of the university that lies in Oak Bay has cost that municipality $400,000 a year in lost revenue.

Had the McMath recommendations been implemented as they have in the case of provincially-owned buildings in Victoria, Mika said UVic and Camosun College would have been taxed on a total assessment of $18 million.

The university would have paid $772,900 and the college $182,058.

Mika said since Saanich's tax levy is between $12 million and $13 million, the loss from the university and college represents a significant portion.

Mika raised the issue Monday after the committee received a letter from university president Howard Petch on the economic impact of the university.

Mika termed Petch's letter fallacious and ludicrous, adding Petch implied that because of the net economic impact, the university should not have to pay its fair share of taxes.

Flooding Cost Put At $20M

The recent flooding in the Terrace-Kitimat area will cost B.C. taxpayers about $20 million.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Monday the province has received 400 damage claims to date, of which 300 have been settled at 100 per cent replacement value.

"I would estimate the cost to B.C. regarding highways, hydro, and the individual citizens, but not the gas line or the Canadian National Railways — hopefully we can keep it around $20 million," Fraser said.

The minister said he expects to have problems with the federal government over the division of expenses.

"I wouldn't say the feds would pull a fast one," he said. "I would say there are a lot of negotiations ahead before we know exactly where we stand with the government of Canada."

The provincial government declared the region a disaster area earlier this month after heavy rains and flooding damaged homes and washed-out highways, bridges and a CNR line.

Box Cars Checked For Boys

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Two Kamloops boys missing since last weekend may have run away from home and hopped aboard a train, an RCMP spokesman said today.

Constable Ken Smith said police were worried the boys might board a box car that could be locked and shunted to a side yard.

They were identified as eight-year-old Michael Robert Laviolette and Angus William Myllynen, 11.

Smith said the boys, who have not been home since Saturday, were seen Sunday in the CP Rail station here but they didn't buy a ticket and probably didn't have any money anyway.

Smith said search and rescue personnel have not been called in, although RCMP have used a tracking dog and their own aircraft in a search of the southern Interior city. No foul play is suspected.

He said trains of both CP Rail and Canadian National Railways pass through the community, and both railway security officers and police at other railway points in British Columbia and Alberta have been notified.

Laviolette was last seen wearing blue jeans and a brown ski jacket while Myllynen had on a red plaid jacket with an imitation fur coller, blue jeans, a black toque and running shoes.

STRIKE, LOCKOUT WORK-LOSS INCREASES

OTTAWA (CP) — Time lost from lockouts and strikes rose to 1,012,050 man-days in August from 82,720 in July, the federal labor department said Monday.

The August statistics indicated 78,698 workers were involved in 233 disputes. Five per cent of the time lost was due to disputes under federal government jurisdiction.

Thirty-three large work stoppages involving more than 500 workers accounted for 72 per cent of the time lost in August. Of those, 27 were in manufacturing and construction.

Total man-days lost from Jan. 1 to August 31 amounted to 4,743,440, compared with 2,290,530 man-days lost in the same period last year.

Tire Blowout Report Public

EDMONTON (CP) — A four-tire blowout of a departing Air Canada Boeing 747 aircraft, with Prince Philip aboard, at Calgary International Airport last Aug. 12 was due to an inadequate brake-energy chart, the federal transport department said Monday.

No one was injured in the incident, which occurred during a second takeoff attempt after the initial takeoff was aborted when a door warning light came on due to "a minor electrical fault."

Prince Philip was on his way back to London after attending the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton.

The department's regional office in Edmonton, releasing its findings into the incident, said the second takeoff was aborted when a traffic controller notified the pilot that rubber was flying from main-wheel tires.

PQ Language Law Gets Another Jolt

MONTREAL (CP) — A key chapter of Quebec's language law making French the primary language of the courts and legislature was struck down Monday when the Quebec Court of Appeal upheld a ruling that the chapter was unconstitutional.

The Quebec government immediately announced it would appeal the decision to the Supreme Court of Canada.

An aide to Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard said Chapter 3 of the Charter of the French Language will remain in force until the Supreme Court hands down a judgment.

Seven appeals court judges, five French-speaking and two anglophones, all upheld a January judgment by Chief Justice Jules Deschenes of Quebec Superior Court which declared that the chapter contravened BNA Act provisions for French and English in the Canadian and Quebec legislatures and in all Quebec courts.

Mr. Justice Andre Dube said the language law, known as Bill 101, and the BNA Act were in "flagrant contradiction" on the issue.

"The natural interpretation of the present text of the British North America Act of 1867 coincides perfectly with the intention of the Fathers of Confederation," Mr. Justice Dube noted.

"That is to establish irrevocably the equality of the English and French languages in the Canadian Parliament and before the Canadian courts as well as before the National Assembly and courts of Quebec."

Premier Rene Levesque, in Ottawa at the federal-provincial economic talks, said he would not comment until he had read the decision. The Parti Quebecois leader has often said Quebec cannot get justice from the Supreme Court because it is dominated by judges from outside the province.

Peter Blaike, one of the three Montreal lawyers who initiated the challenge to Chapter 3, welcomed the appeal court's decision, saying Quebec's planned Supreme Court appeal would put the provincial government in a "very peculiar position."

"They've said the Supreme Court is biased, but it's pretty hard to say that about eight Quebec judges who have agreed with us on this."

Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan told a news conference the government should not be allowed to claim any political advantage by having the contested section declared invalid in the Supreme Court.

"I can't see any embarrassment in a ruling that upholds the right of a citizen, and that includes lawyers, to address the courts in the language of their choice," Ryan said.

Quebec government lawyers had argued in their appeal that parts of Section 133 of the BNA Act dealing with Quebec form part of a "provincial constitution" mentioned in Section 92, and that Quebec should have the right to amend it.

But Mr. Justice Paul Casey wrote that the "BNA Act was an attempt to resolve the problems unavoidably caused by the separate existence and divided populaton of the colonies. A basic requirement of this solution was that minority rights be respected — hence Section 133."

Rematch

It looks like a rematch on Dec. 6 for the chairmanship of the Capital Regional Board.

Regional directors elect the chairman from among the 18 members and last year Jim Campbell of Saturna Island, who is completing his sixth year as chairman, won by a 10-8 vote over city alderman Murray Glazier.

Glazier said Monday he will run again and Campbell said recently he is willing to stand again "if board members want me."

Teng Spurning No.1 Job

HONG KONG (AP) — Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-Ping tried to end speculation about a power struggle between himself and Chairman Hua Kuo-feng and to soften the current wall-poster campaign criticizing late party Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Hong Kong newspapers reported today that Teng told U.S. columnist Robert Novak in an interview that he had twice turned down offers to take the premiership from Hua, once 18 months ago and again more recently.

Teng, 74, said he refused to take Hua's second job because of his age and his desire to stay at the helm of China's modernization program, the Peking dispatches in both Communist and non-Communist newspapers said.

A series of wall posters began appearing in Peking last week, creating speculation that Teng, twice-purged political heir to the late Premier Chou En-lai, was about to be elevated to premier and might even become Communist party chairman.

The posters praised Teng and criticized Mao for stripping him of his government and party posts in 1976, five months before the party chairman died. Mao picked Hua, 57, as his successor. Hua was named premier and party chairman while Teng was in disgrace.

Answering speculation about a power struggle, Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency, said Teng told a visiting Japanese politician that China is stable and united.

Hsinhua said Teng told Novak that without Mao "there would have been no new China." And the Hong Kong newspapers report he also said that although the wall-poster campaign was a "fine thing" and the exercise of a constitutional right, some of the opinions expressed were wrong.

Meanwhile, a Hong Kong pro-Communist magazine, The Trends, reported that the first victim of the radicals' cultural revolution purge in the late 1960s, chief of state Liu Shao-chi, died of pneumonia in 1969 on a train taking him from Peking to exile in Honan Province in central China.

The Chinese government has never announced whether Liu was alive or dead. A Hong Kong newspaper controlled by Peking, Ta Kung Pao, reported three years ago that Liu had died but gave no details.

Meanwhile, Peking's leaders came under fire today from Amnesty International.

Egyptian PM Flying to U.S.

President Anwar Sadat is sending his prime minister to Washington within 48 hours with a letter to President Carter in an attempt to break the peace talks deadlock.

An Israeli newspaper speculated that a U.S. request for economic growth forecasts on the West Bank was in preparation to give aid to what could be a Palestinian entity. The U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv called the report nonsense.

Syrian authorities have ordered a ban on trade with Egypt as part of the measures ordered at last month's Baghdad summit to counter Sadat's initiative with Israel, the newspaper Al Thawra said today in Damascus.

U.S. officials in Washington said Sadat's letter will allow the deadlocked Egyptian-Israeli peace talks to resume by the weekend.

In Cairo, Sadat, forging ahead with development plans, issued a decree today dividing the Sinai desert into two zones and appointing two army generals to run the areas. Egypt will get the Sinai back as part of the treaty with Israel.

The division of Sinai into two administrative zones is part of government efforts to devote greater attention to the greening and exploitation of the desert after the Israeli pullout.

The appointments of the two generals were part of a reshuffle of provincial governors. Maj. Gen. Mohammed Hussein Shawkat was appointed governor of northern Sinai and Maj. Gen. Farid Ezzat Wahba of southern Sinai.

In Tel Aviv, a request by the U.S. Embassy for economic growth forecasts in Israeli occupied territories up to 1990 touched off speculation by the paper Yedioth Ahronoth that the information was to be used for granting aid to the region when it becomes autonomous.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman called it "nonsense."

In Jerusalem, government sources said today Israel was also worried about Egypt's support of a UN resolution calling for an arms embargo against the Jewish state.

"This is not in the spirit of the Camp David accords but we haven't signed anything with Egypt yet," one source said.

In Washington, U.S. officials said Monday the stalled talks would resume after the Egyptian prime minister hands Sadat's reply to the U.S. compromise proposal to Carter. They said they expected the talks to reopen by Saturday.

Cuba Arms Funnel

WASHINGTON — Cuba is reported to be supplying financial aid and weapons, including 50-calibre machine-guns, to leftist guerrilla forces in Nicaragua, a secret intelligence document says.

The information in a report obtained by The Associated Press was based on what are described as "generally reliable" intelligence sources in Panama, which appear to have been acting as a conduit for the Cuban supplies.

U.S. officials evaluating the information emphasized that reports of Cuban involvement in guerrilla attempts to overthrow President Anastasio Somoza cannot be fully confirmed. In any event, they said any Cuban support of the guerrillas has been limited.

Cuba's hostility toward Somoza dates back to the early 1960s when Somoza allowed Nicaragua to be used as a staging area for Cuban exile attacks on Cuba.

The intelligence document was based, in part, on information supplied by a former Panamanian official, who gave the following account:

"According to Moises Torrijos, brother of (Panamanian) National Guard Commander Omar Torrijos, and Abraham Saied, director of Panamanian Social Security, the Cuban government is providing material and financial support to the Sandinista National Liberation Front. Saied said specifically that Cuban Premier Fidel Castro . . . was sending arms and ammunition to the FSLN (the Sandinistas)."

ANCIENT COIN POSER IN U.S. VIKING SAGA

LONDON (AP) — An old coin found in Maine may confirm the theory that the Vikings discovered North America before Columbus, a British expert said today.

Peter Seaby, chairman of Seaby's, the London coin and medal company, said he studied photographs of the coin and says it is Norse and probably minted between 1065 and 1080. He said it is comparable to coins made for Olaf Kyrre, son of Norwegian King Harold Hardrada, who was killed at the battle of Stamford Bridge in England in 1066.

"I understand the coin was discovered 17 years ago by amateur archeologists digging into an Indian rubbish pit that is centuries old, perhaps thousands of years old," Seaby said.

"How the Indians could have had the coin is utterly unknown. The coin may have been a personal ornament as it seems to have been pierced for wearing round the neck, so it does not necessarily indicate settlement. It might have been taken from the body of a Norseman."

An Unpromising Beginning

The first day of the first ministers' economic summit in Ottawa does not bode well for the country's economic future. The opening statements from the 11 first ministers produced a rehash of old and hackneyed ideas, a lot of tossing about of blame, and a wide range of views on the direction in which Canada's economic policy should be pointing. They did not produce a single new, creative idea nor anything which vaguely resembled a consensus on the nature of our country's economic problems.

The premiers of the maritimes, troubled by unemployment rates they described as "tragic," wanted much more stimulation of the economy and government action to create jobs. Premier Frank Moores of Newfoundland, for instance, wanted the federal government to abolish the Foreign Investment Review Agency because of the "psychological barriers" it creates towards foreign investment.

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque complained that recent federal government spending cuts seemed to hit Quebec harder than any other province and expressed deep misgivings that Quebec and Ottawa could ever work co-operatively on economic matters.

Ontario Premier Bill Davis complained about the Alberta government's heritage fund — established with profits from oil sales — saying it was taking too much money out of the economy.

Saskatchewan Premier Alan Blakeney supported the Maritime premiers in putting stimulation of the economy and job creation at the top of his priority list.

But Manitoba Premier Sterling Lyon and B.C. Premier Bill Bennett believed the government should be much more concerned about inflation and should concentrate on reducing government spending and making better use of tax dollars.

And so on. And so forth.

Not a single premier began the conference with any announcement of a sacrifice his province was prepared to make, or even a new program his government was prepared to undertake, to try to deal with the country's economic ills.

The only person to produce anything that remotely resembled a new idea was Prime Minister Trudeau who hinted broadly that his government would be prepared to impose another round of wage-and-price controls if there were indications that inflation was not being kept under control. In truth, this cannot be described as a new program; rather it is a recycling of an old program that didn't work particularly well the first time around.

Although it may be argued that the controls imposed in 1975 did break the worst of the inflationary spiral gripping the country at the time, the government never came close to meeting its goals on inflation rates during the time they were in effect. At the same time, their existence discouraged stimulation of the economy and probably contributed to existing high rates of unemployment.

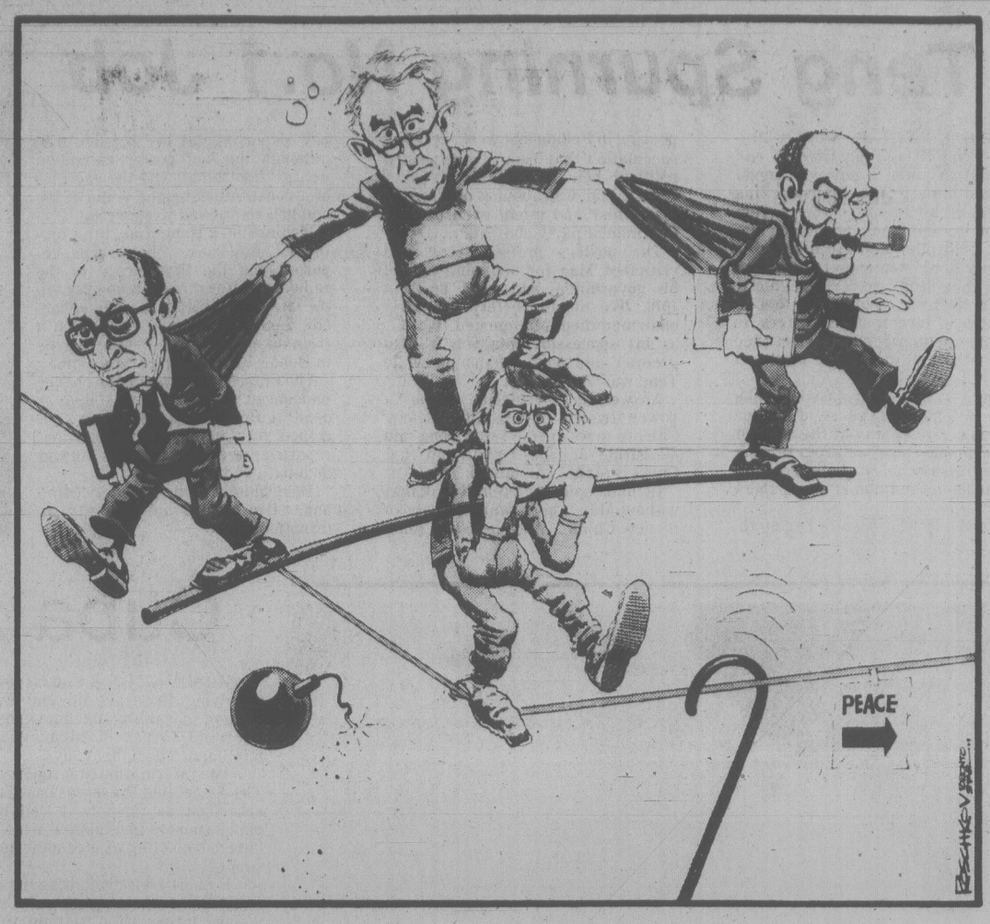
It also became clear by the end of the control period that they had imposed a significantly higher burden on wage-earners and workers than on corporations. Indeed, attempts by the workers to catch up with what they lost during the control period is a prime reason for the rising rate of wage demands now.

Another round of wage and price controls would most likely do little but exacerbate these problems.

It is, of course, not yet impossible that the 11 first ministers will settle down to serious debate and come up with some concrete, imaginative plans to try to improve the Canadian economic picture.

But all indications are that they will agree instead to a couple more studies, some philosophic generalities (like, inflation and unemployment are both bad), a tiny program or two, so non-controversial that everyone can support them.

They will then go home, hoping against hope that they have accomplished something and Canada will continue stumbling on into the economic gloom.



TOM WICKER

Salisbury High Life Goes On

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — Just before an Air Rhodesia jet landed in Salisbury early one recent evening, all the cabin lights were turned out as a precaution against guerrilla attacks. As I sat a little nervously in the dark, a journalist's phrase passed through my mind:

"The reality of Rhodesia," I would write, "is fear."

Well, not exactly. There's plenty of fear in the countryside but the reality of Salisbury seems more nearly to be business as usual and fun while it lasts. Walking about the busy streets of this western-style capital (there's a pedestrian shopping mall in the center of town and a considerable parking problem all round it), a visitor could hardly guess that Rhodesia is engaged in a desperate, probably losing struggle against black nationalist guerrillas.

Lots to Drink

Security force soldiers in camouflage suits are much in evidence but so ar busy shoppers in well-stocked stores. Office buildings have security guards to check handbags and briefcases, but not the last of Rhodesia's oddities is that in a war against black nationalists, the security guards are uniformly black.

At noontime and the cocktail hour, it's standing room only in the Captain's Cabin bar at the excellent Meikles Hotel, with journalists and what they call "troopies" (soldiers) vying for space among the townsfolk. There is dinner dancing in the dining room and the ballrooms are taken every night for private parties.

The city's extensive white suburbs, dotted with swimming pools and tennis courts among the lavish villas, appear to be an open target. But urban terrorism — save a few bomb incidents in black areas — has not yet come to Salisbury, and no one seems quite sure why.

If war seems remote, Salisbury's prosperous air and the good life still being lived here by whites also appear to contradict the fact that Rhodesia for years has been the target of worldwide economic sanctions.

Shops and sidewalks are bustling with business, autos crowd the streets, American Express and Diners Club cards are accepted at Echo car rentals where new Renaults are available, and prices startle the inflation-weary visitor — 14 Rhodesian dollars a night for a first-class hotel room and six dollars for a good steak dinner (about U.S. $19 and $8).

At least three reasons for this state of affairs are obvious. Rhodesia has an ample supply of cheap black labor. It grows most of its own food. And South Africa, its southern neighbor, keeps open a gigantic hole in the wall of sanctions, as well as providing certain subsidies and some military assistance.

Nor have other nations, including the United States, rigidly observed the sanctions they have approved. Britain is involved in a scandal concerning illicit oil deliveries (gasoline is rationed here but easily available). Ammunition for the security forces — once in short supply — is reported to come in by a circuitous route from Middle Eastern Arab states.

But both black and white Rhodesians say the impact of sanctions has been more serious than may appear. White bread has just gone up by a cent and a half to 21 cents a loaf. Affluent visitors may consider prices low, but low-income (mostly black) urban families have been hard hit by food prices that have risen by 10 per cent since January, transport costs up 5.5 per cent in the September quarter, and an "all-items" price index 6.9 per cent higher than in October, 1977.

Like a Criminal

One consequence of sanctions, blacks say, is crippling unemployment in their community. And while exact figures are kept secret, Rhodesian tobacco — a major crop — is believed to sell at about a third below the world price.

But just beyond Salisbury, not the good life but spreading guerrilla warfare is the reality. And as Tolstoy said of Moscow waiting or Napoleon, this city seems "like a criminal being led to the gallows, who knows that in a minute he must die but yet stares about him and straightens the cap sitting awry on his head."

Chamber of Commerce Dream

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce met last weekend to decide its priorities for 1979 and came up with a series of suggestions that are, at least, innovative.

Whether they are practical or not is, however, quite another question. The chamber's main goal seems to centre around the creation of a massive development in Victoria West on the land now occupied by the Songhees Indian reserve. The chamber hopes to build there not only a major hotel and commercial centre but also an industrial park and docks for deep-sea ships.

It is an interesting idea, but there are surely several flaws in it. First, what ships are going to use the docks? In recent years there has been a decline in the use by shipping of the existing Ogden Point docks with, for example, the closing down of the grain elevator. We certainly have heard no great cries from shippers of the need for more docks in the city.

Second, a high-standard hotel complex and an industrial park seem to be somewhat incompatible neighbors. Although industrial parks can now be relatively well-landscaped and non-polluting, they cannot provide an interesting atmosphere nor the peace and quiet normally demanded by hotel guests.

Third, one can foresee such a project creating serious traffic problems for the city. The Songhees land is accessible to the rest of the city only via the Johnson Street bridge, a bridge that is already causing the city innumerable problems. To add substantially to the traffic on that bridge with trucks from an industrial park and general traffic from a hotel-commercial complex would surely increase those problems.

Other questions might be asked about the financing for the project, the fact that it contradicts the regional plan, and the costs of any industrial land that might be developed there.

Perhaps the chamber of commerce directors have already worked out answers for many of these questions and just have not yet made them public. If that is the case, they should do so immediately. Far more details are needed before the chamber approaches the regional district or other levels of government to try to win approval for the idea.

With an outline of the plan as vague and general as the one given this week, the idea must be dismissed as nothing more than an idealistic dream — and that from a group that prides itself on being composed of hard-headed businessmen.

Communist Tools

J. Philip Fawcett (Communist or Not, Nov. 20) does not feel that either Nkomo or Mugabe, leaders of the terrorist organizations based in Zambia and Mozambique, are tools of the communists.

Perhaps he thinks that the weapons, ammunition and other military aid are simply "given" to these organizations — no strings attached. Russia, the benevolent upholder of political and religious freedom, always ready to support minority groups or the supressed, as long as it's not too close to her own borders. I am sure many Hungarian, Polish and Czechoslovakian people could vouch for that.

No, when these groups accept this military aid, they are helping Mother Russia put the next phase of a smart tactical plan into action. Her ultimate goal is the control of Africa, especially the developed and strategically important southern sector. With Rhodesia and South West Africa (Namibia) controlled by black governments, brought to power with communist military aid, the Republic of South Africa would be completely surrounded by countries with strong communist ties.

For the above reasons I must agree with Katherine Chatterton (Indefensible Gift, Oct. 31) that both Nkomo and Mugabe are most definitely tools of the communists, even though they, and many others, may not realize it at this stage of the war game.

I have found no parallel between the aid offered by the World Council of Churches to the Patriotic Front and the admonition of Jesus to feed the hungry, etc.

This aid offered by the WCC has both political and racial connotations because of the number of black countries represented within the organization. Many radical proposals by this bloc probably go unopposed by the moderate countries represented, as they are afraid to be accused of supporting the white regimes in southern Africa.

If this aid is neither politically or racially based, why are the white and black Rhodesians who support the present internal settlement not entitled to receive some of the so-called humanitarian aid offered by the WCC when they suffer the agonies of these terrorist attacks? — Lauchlan M Glen, 3137 Qu'Appelle Street.

No Canadians who could do Lorne's job for the Bank of B.C.?

Homegrown Talent

I have been furious for some time, and as the months pass by I get furiouser and furiouser. Over our Bank of B.C.'s advertisements featuring Lorne Green — of Hollywood, that's what!

Is there no resident Canadian can do the job?

I would suggest that the bank powers that be look about in Canada and thereby find and patronize home talent. Surely there must be many Canadians who resent this blatant indifference to our loyal stay-in-Canada celebrities. — Mrs. Evelyn M. Stewart, 513-1701 Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Trapping Methods

Late in 1975, just before the election, the Social Credit Party stated: "Cruel methods of trapping will be banned within three years and indeed sooner if humane traps are invented before that time."

The end of the three-year period will occur on Dec. 31 — little more than a month from now. But still there is no indication that cruel trapping is to be banned. Indeed, there is clear evidence that the provincial government intends to postpone any ban. Written material issued by Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf includes the statement: "B.C. will continue to review legislation to eliminate cruel trapping methods within technological limits."

This is an entirely different stand than that taken three years ago. The more recent statement is vague and half-hearted. It is not the straightforward, positive pre-election statement. Surely that was a commitment to put a stop to the cruelty within three years at the outside.

I have tried to understand the arguments against a ban. These include the argument that the animals are a part of our resources and must be harvested, the argument that some people (trappers) would suffer if their income from trapping were to be cut off, the argument that other people working for fur companies, trap manufacturers etc., would lose their jobs.

Certainly, it is a matter of grave concern that human beings might be deprived of jobs or income. That posssibility also worries me. But invariably I end with the shocking thought: notwithstanding all that, many, many animals continue to suffer severely. In the trapping season in B.C. each year, more than 100,000 animals are caught in traps. And that means a lot of flesh-tearing, bone-crunching pain.

How can anyone accept any arguments that support such wide-spread torture? Is our government going to act? — Alan Cameron, 3030 McAnally Road.

Selfish, Dangerous

On Nov. 7, the Times published an article by Ab Kent on the Second Front Page, entitled We Won't Be Able to Replace Ourselves. It quoted Geoffrey N. Calvert and told of future economic woes to come as a result of our supposedly declining birth rate. If Mr. Calvert is quoted correctly, I find that what he propounds is selfish, irresponsible and dangerous.

It is unfortunate that with the eas, access to, and the broad coverage from the media, many people put themselves forward as authorities in given fields and are given credence, when in fact they are not qualified as authorities.

Mr. Calvert is an actuary, an expert in the theory and practice of statistics — especially of mortality, sickness, retirement and unemployment — mostly for life insurance and retirement fund purposes. He is not an economist, a geologist, or an agronomist, and to say that he is an expert in these fields is, to say the least, naive.

But to return to the main point — it doesn't take much intelligence to figure out that there are too many people in the world. This is not only true of the underdeveloped nations, but also, and most especially, the western industrialized nations. According to recent studies in the U.S., the birth rate is not declining and our population is certainly not.

When the underdeveloped nations overpopulate themselves (as most are doing) the worst they do is starve themselves to death — they do not harm anyone but themselves. When a Canadian or an American has a child, however, they are producing a consumer of the world's resources and a polluter of the world environment. The average Canadian or American consumes more than 20 times the amount of food and resources than the average person in an underdeveloped country.

It is not difficult to figure out that there is a finite quantity of resources in the world and whether we use them up by the year 2000 or by the year 2100, once they're gone, they're gone.

How can Mr. Calvert be so selfish as to suggest that there are not or will not be enough of us around? By consuming now, what are we leaving for those who follow us five, 15 and 25 generations from now? It certainly will not be the standard of living that we now enjoy.

Moreover, many researchers are now finding that the effects of water and air pollution (among others) are much more severe, far-reaching and long-lasting than was previously suspected. Because of industrial contaminants in our environment and artificial additives in our food, the instances of cancer of all types, as well as genetic damage to our unborn children is rising drastically. Is this the gift of life that these children deserve?

It seems to me that many people in a position of power in North America today have similarly narrow-minded attitudes to Mr. Calvert's. The dollar seems to take precedence over everything else.

While it is true that the capitalist system has been an excellent way of rapidly developing a new nation's economy and resources (such as the U.S. and Canada), it relies on constantly expanding markets to function properly. When markets (the number of customers for a nation's products) become static or decline, there is always a recession or a depression. I believe that this is what we are seeing now in North America. World and domestic markets are not expanding as rapidly as they did a few years ago.

There are no major wars to create artificial markets, the underdeveloped countries don't have the money to buy our products and the population of the developed countries is not growing fast enough to provide us with enough new customers. As a result, we have seen a decrease in the value of the dollar, rampant inflation, widespread unemployment and a decline in most stock market averages. I cannot say what the best alternative to our present economic system is, but clearly it is not working well as it is. To say that one of the ways we will suffer economically is through lack of population, as Mr. Calvert suggests, is the same as saying that we will suffer without a good war to help things along.

To cure the economic and social woes of Canada and the world, we will have to look for alternatives in our economic thought and our lifestyles. Many religious and moral values that were useful and appropriate when there were fewer people in the world and technology was less advanced are now antiquated and destructive. People like Mr. Calvert, who still voice this type of thinking, are dinosaurs.

If humanity is to survive without tumbling to the depths of poverty, we must do two things: change our economic thought and values, and reduce our numbers. If we are to remain healthy, one of the most important things we must do is decrease pollution of all types. The easiest and most efficient way to do this is to reduce our numbers. It is no longer necessary to have extermination campaigns, wars or starvation — birth control now makes it easy and humane.

Why is it that most people — people like Mr. Calvert — find it so difficult to believe that there are too many of us everywhere in the world? And how big a plank will it take to hit people over the head before they will take this problem seriously? — S. J. Silver, 560 Croma Road, Sidney.

'Save Wildlife to Save Ourselves'

JEREMY BUGLER
London Observer

You suffer from heart disease? Look to the albatross. A hemophiliac in the family? The manatee may help. Worried about the world's petrol running out? The Giant Ipilipil Tree may put your mind at rest. Concerned at what the future starving millions are going to do for food? Eelgrass, tropical yams and planktonic algae may come to the rescue.

All these forms of wildlife may in time contribute to curing major diseases or meeting future shortages, according to a new report by Dr. Norman Myers and published by Earthscan, a London information service supported by the United Nations Environment Program. Dr. Myers' report follows hard on the heels of a study published this autumn by the Worldwatch Institute, a Washington think-tank.

The two reports together amount to a formidable argument: a huge variety of wildlife forms have great potential value for mankind, and we destroy them at our peril. They represent an attempt to save wildlife by appealing not to arguments of sentiment or fine feeling but of self-interest. These endangered species, they say, have considerable economic value to man.

This is a new tack by wildlife experts, as well as being a sound one, and it may prove one of the most successful.

Myers points out that only a small segment of the planet's species have been investigated so far. "The global spectrum of wildlife is one of man-mind's most valuable raw materials for the undetermined needs of the future."

He says "only a few" of the 46,000 known vertebrate animals have been "subjected to research for their utilitarian services" and hardly any attention has been given to the millions of invertebrate animal species, notably insects.

More attention has been given to wild plants: about 10 per cent of the planet's 300,000 species of higher plants have been screened for some purpose, although only one per cent have been thoroughly examined.

"We know next to nothing of the biological, chemical and mechanical properties of most of the 1.6 million plant and animal species identified by science, let alone the three to eight million other species which are believed to exist on earth but have not yet been documented," says Myers.

At the most obvious level, wildlife forms offer the chance of food. Today a mere 20 plant species produce 90 per cent of the world's food, but some 150 plant species have been cultivated on a large scale in the past, and no less than a staggering 80,000 species are believed to be edible.

Myers cites some possible candidates: the cereal eelgrass, which lives in estuaries. Its grain breaks loose and floats ashore when it is ripe. Julius Caesar, it is thought, fed his cavalry horses on eelgrass when he was campaingning in North Africa in 46 BC.

Or there is the blue-green algae that grows around the shores of Lake Chad, flourishing in saline waters. The local villagers filter it out of the water and cook it as a green vegetable. It is rich in protein and vitamins and a trial project in growing it commercially in Mexico has shown that one acre of water can produce 77 pounds of protein per day.

Then one may look to the aborigines in Australia who favor certain wild yams that are adapted to dry conditions. It may be that this crop could be extended to the semi-desert parts of the world.

Both plants and animals offer many benefits to medicine. An extraordinary range of wildlife is helping research into fighting disease. The albatross and other long flying ocean birds have highly developed heart systems which are leading to a better understanding of "cardiomypathy," an obstruction of blood flow caused by an overdeveloped heart muscle.

Elephants throw light on atherosclerosis (another heart disease). The Florida manatee, which has blood that does not clot easily, may be useful in research into haemophilia.

Anti-cancer work relies on a great variety of plants and animals: cotton-topped marmosets, butterflies, the rosy periwinkle plant from Madagascar, which has helped to get the recovery rate from Hodgkin's Disease up from 19 per cent to 80 per cent.

The rosy periwinkle has a substance, vincristine, in its stem: in 1976 sales of vincristine added up to $22 million, which gives an idea of what one plant can be worth.

For energy supplies, trees and plants can be exploited. Some of the Euphorbia species produce hydrocarbons like oil. Other trees like the Giant Ipilipil, widely grown in the Philippines, can be used for "biomass farming." An acre of Giant Ipilipils can easily produce 500 cubic feet per year of firewood, which can either be processed to produce an oil-like petroleum or burned direct in heat and power boilers.

Understandably, Norman Myers believes: "Every day, scientists are finding more ways in which species can offer immediate utilitarian benefits to mankind."

A Laid-Back Critic Gets Himself Together

By ROBERT FULFORD

At any given moment various parts of the English-speaking world are involved in an elaborate game of language exchange. The rules of the game, which are maintained consciously or unconsciously, involve the steady freshening of one's language with words imported from the various cultures and technologies that offer them. People grow tired of their old language and turn it in for a new one — but never too abruptly, never in a way that will frighten them or the people who listen to them.

Some of us resist change, at times bitterly. About 1969 I heard someone say, "He can't get himself together," and thought it sounded odd. A year or two later, perhaps, I first used the phrase — but ironically, as if with quotation marks around it. And then, a year or two after that, I found myself speaking and realized that the obvious, the true, the right expression of a certain thought was, "He can't get himself together." The phrase had insinuated itself into my speech. I had turned in some old language ("He's too disorganized" or "He's mixed up") for some new.

Or take "laid-back." Half a dozen or more years ago, it swept through the entertainment world like a rogue virus. It sounded funny to me: "He plays in a, well, laid-back style." "He's in a laid-back lifestyle." But as the years passed I discovered — to my mingled astonishment, horror and amusement — that there were in my life certain personalities or situations that could accurately be described only with the term

ALLEN . . . he's confused too

"laid-back." They cried out for it. I succumbed.

There was a time when I knew exactly where I stood on jargon. I stood with George Orwell, who said that it was wrong — maybe even evil — to substitute "prefabricated words and phrases" for good standard English. It was wrong because these prefabrications took the place of thought rather than supported it. People gave themselves and others the false impression they were thinking when actually they were just running through some trite phrases.

Orwell would approve of the American writer R. D. Rosen, who coined the word "psychobabble" in 1977 as a description of all those words that flow from various kinds of mental therapy into everyday conversation. "Relate." "Where your head is at." "I'm not in that space anymore."

Rosen argued that though the people who use these phases claim to be seeking spontaneity, candor and understanding, their language produces just the opposite. It chokes off the possibility of real understanding by reducing conversation to a series of calcified verbal formalities. These with-it people are in the end — so far as one can gather from their conversation — as emotionally deadened as the stilted and boring square world from which they desire to escape.

But while Orwell in his time and Rosen in his have made good sense, my instincts have pushed me rather closer to the other side — towards sympathy and engagement with those who in their nutty and constantly shifting ways are trying (as the phrase goes) to "expand their consciousness."

I'm glad Woody Allen is as confused as any of us on this issue. Allen doesn't know whether to make fun of psychobabble, as in Annie Hall, or take it seriously, as in Interiors. After seeing both films twice I've finally decided I like the Woody Allen of Interiors better than the Woody Allen of Annie Hall. I Like him better, that is, when he decided to stop genially kidding his audiences and instead confronts them with issues they may find hard to handle.

Psychobabble plays a major role in Cyra McFadden's satiric novel, The Serial: A Year in the Life of Marin County, which was published last season to enthusiastic reviews. McFadden, working on roughly the same level as the pre-Interiors Woody Allen, describes those affluent Americans living north of San Francisco whose modes of life are as close to the avant-garde as they can make them. They try everything: esoteric forms of therapy, open marriage, art forms that the rest of the world regards as crazy. And their conversation is like an endless consciousness-raising session. Whatever they do, they are "heavily into" it.

The Serial was widely described as hilarious, and certainly it's done with great skill. But I found it too painful to finish, possibly for the same reason I found Annie Hall more painful than Interiors. The characters in The Serial are silly and often graceless, and no doubt therefore laughable, but they are all trying so damned hard, and with such desperation — and quite clearly failing in whatever they attempt, from macrame to marriage — that their lives seem almost too sad to contemplate.

They have the money that their ancestors dreamed of, they have the freedom their ancestors fought for, and now they are conscious that it's their duty to make something grand, something vital, something original, something worthwhile. They don't know what it is, or how to make it, so they talk about it in psychobabble and thereby make the search at least comforting. In this confusing process there is much that can just be satirized, but there is a great deal that is touching too, and possibly even something admirable.

The Demon Water

russell baker

Social historians will date the decline of the cocktail party from the summer of 1975, when chic people first asked for "a little white wine with soda and ice" instead of the traditional rum, whisky or gin.

The reasons for this shift are obscure. It is usually said that Americans became tired of being blasted out of their heads by strong drink, but this makes little sense. The only point of a cocktail party was to take leave of the senses, it being universally understood that nobody in his right mind would want to be present at one.

Why should anyone deliberately go to a cocktail party knowing in advance that the thing would have to be endured without anesthesia? Worse — that it would have to be endured while sipping the thin despair of watery wine?

A likelier explanation may be the tyranny of fashion. This theory gains support from the latest development on the party front, which is the replacement of weak wine with water. All over the East Coast this summer, and perhaps even in less benighted regions for all I know, ostensibly sane people are turning up at parties and ordering water.

What is even more curious, they ask for imported water. American water isn't good enough for them. Most of the water consumed at these sterile debauches seems to be imported from France, though recently I met someone who brought his own Yugoslavian water.

People who used to ask for a martini or a daiquiri now take an imported water with a slice of lime. Never a slice of salami. Don't ask me why. There is no explaining chic.

With this development, the cocktail party becomes moribund, although it may still have a step or two to travel before it surrenders the ghost. Next year perhaps we will see rooms filled with people holding glasses of mouthwash. It can't be used in a crowded space, but it looks good in the glass and gives people something to do with their hands while they stare at each other with glazed eyes and wonder how much more time must elapse before they can decently depart.

Eventually, people will simply come and stand around boring each other with nothing at all in their hands, at which point they will either start wreaking mayhem on each other or, more likely, decide it is more interesting to go outside and stand on a street corner.

The decline of the cocktail party into a non-drinking occasion may be part of the health fad now entrancing what used to be called the drinking classes. Nobody ever seriously argued that gin was good for you, just that it made encounters with strangers a little more interesting than imported water.

At a time when moneyed Americans are seeking joy through suffering — dieting, jogging and attempting to justify God's way toward man with Milton and Zen alone — the light head and heavy calories resulting from alcohol impede the struggle to stay in fashion.

There is a lot of commendable puritan zeal in the struggle for self-improvement, but also a certain antisocial component. Self-improvement, as every striver knows, is a lonely business. The jogger, the dieter, the person resolutely locked in with his textbooks and his meditations are all engaged in lonely work.

Cocktails, on the other hand, are mixed to stir the broth of society. Their rise to popularity as an American institution probably resulted from the need for a catalyst that would make it easier for strangers to become acquainted in a mobile society where almost everyone had become a stranger after the breakdown of rural communities and the move to town.

Temperance folk may say it's shameful that strangers can't get to know each other without the help of demon gin, but this is an indictment of the American's natural unease in society as much as a rap on booze.

If Americans were able to let their hair down over imported water, prohibition might have succeeded. The cocktail party surely would never have been invented, no man would ever have insulted his boss, no woman would ever have been indiscreet, and millions of fascinating people would have gone to their graves never having seemed anything but boring to anybody but their next of kin.

I miss all these things at the imported-water parties nowadays with their dedicated guests on lonesome pursuits, sturdily keeping their hair up. Next morning, of course, there is a clear head but very little worth remembering with it.

Where else could you get so many dreams for a nickel?

Remember the days when grease was something you put on your hair, not something you saw at the movies?

Those were the good old days when you could make a phone call for a nickel. When it was cool to sit over a soda after a hard day at school and listen to Buddy Holly singing "Peggy Sue" on the jukebox. When you wore the same clothes as everyone else. Stove-pipe jeans, tee shirt and leather jacket for him. Pedal pushers, angora sweaters and reversible skirts for her.

Those were also the days when you were rich if you were earning $10,000 a year by the time you were thirty. It doesn't seem like big money now, but back then it was more than enough to buy that first house. It's hard to believe that a bungalow with a white picket fence and garden went for under $15,000.

Things are different these days. The jukebox is as quaint as an old 78 rpm record. Now it's strobe lights and discos and dress as you please. That three bedroom bungalow has gone up to $55,000 or more. Even though your salary has kept up with those higher prices, it still takes good money management to put together that all-important down payment. That's where we can help. With a Royal Trust Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan.

A Royal Trust RHOSP lets you save for your home with tax-free dollars – up to $1,000 each year until you've deposited $10,000. You can take up to 20 years to deposit your $10,000 limit, but you can withdraw your savings any time before that.

That's not all. Your money will earn interest in your choice of two Royal Trust investment programs specially designed for RHOSP savings.

If you already have a RHOSP and are thinking of buying a home, now's the time to talk to us about it. Before the Judge

A 35-year-old man charged in connection with a Nov. 8 shooting in Saanich elected trial by judge and jury when he appeared in provincial court Monday.

Thomas Young Lackey, also known as Gary Wallace Ross, was formally charged Friday with the attempted murder of Sgt. William Hillcoat following the early-morning exchange of gunfire in which both men were wounded, armed robbery in connection with the theft of a car earlier in the evening, possession of a dangerous weapon (sawed-off shotgun), unlawfully use of the shotgun, and discharging a shotgun with intent to wound Hillcoat.

Vancouver lawyer Peter Ritchie, representing Lackey, advised Judge Blake-Allan that his client will remain in custody at Oakalla on the Mainland until his preliminary hearing which was set for Jan. 29 and 31.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Lackey will be kept there because there are better medical facilities. Lackey was hit three times by police gunfire, twice in his leg and once in the face, requiring the removal of his left eye.

Agreeing with Crown counsel Don Laughton that the use of forged or stolen credit cards is spreading, Judge William Ostler sentenced a 30-year-old man to two years in jail.

Rene Arthur Maisonneuve, 1204 Yates, re-elected trial by magistrate Monday and pleaded guilty to possession of a stolen credit card.

Laughton told the court the card was stolen from another apartment in the same block in which Maisonneuve was living on Aug. 20. Later that day, Laughton continued, Maisonneuve picked up four persons previously unknown to him at about 6:30 p.m., and took them to Don Mee Restaurant, 538 Fisgard, where they had a $100.60 meal.

When Maisonneuve tried to pay by the credit card, cashier Lillian Taw phoned Vancouver to ascertain if the credit card was stolen and when informed it was, confronted Maisonneuve with the information. Laughton said Maisonneuve ran out of the restaurant.

At about 10 p.m. the same evening, Maisonneuve was spotted by two staff members of the restaurant who were at a nearby parking lot and noticed Maisonneuve lurking around cars. The two apprehended him and held him until city police arrived.

Laughton told the court Maisonneuve had a lengthy criminal history for related offences dating back to 1968 and that he was in custody in Duncan in connection with a weekend break-in at a liquor store there.

Ostler also ordered Maisonneuve to pay compensation to the restaurant.

A 23-year-old William Head inmate received an additional 90 days after pleading guilty to 1976 charges brought in from Ontario at his request.

Daryl William Griffith, serving a two-year sentence imposed Feb. 9, 1978, in Nanaimo for attempted breaking and entering, pleaded guilty Friday to an attempted break-in June 19, 1976, in Hamilton, driving while suspended, and three counts of breach of recognizance in connection with court appearances.

Allan rejected defence lawyer William McElmoyle's application for concurrent sentences and handed out a 60-day, consecutive term for the attempted break-in and a 30-day term, consecutive to the previous sentence and any sentence Griffith is now serving, for driving while suspended. Two terms of 30 days and one of 15 days, all concurrent, were handed out for the breaches.

A 30-year-old Saanich man was charged with theft over and theft under $200 from Imperial Building Materials Ltd., 2955 Douglas.

Donald Stephen Hutchings, 3213 Service, is charged with taking tools, appliances and building materials between March 1 and Nov. 3 and was remanded until next Tuesday for election of his trial method.

A 25-year-old Sooke man was given a 15-day term for his third drinking-driving conviction in less than four years.

Greig Philip Campbell, 2057 Kaltasin, changed his plea to guilty on a Sept. 16 charge of impaired driving and Crown counsel Richard Anthony entered a stay of proceedings on a charge of refusing a breath test demand made by Colwood RCMP.

Campbell was convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 Nov. 6, 1974, in Saanich and was fined $250, and was convicted of the same offence April 12, 1977, in Victoria and fined another $1,000.

Two women who pleaded guilty to a Nov. 15 shoplifting spree at Eaton's were remanded until Dec. 15 for sentencing.

Arlene Alexandra MacDonald, 27, of 2402 Byron, and Linda Christine Steele, 31, of 1782 Bay, entered their guilty pleas to a joint charge of theft over $200.

Mulligan said MacDonald had $323.45 worth of stolen merchandise on her and Steele had $253.41 worth when arrested outside the store.

MacDonald had a previous conviction for theft on Nov. 22, 1977, at Sydney, N.S., when she was fined $75.

Bruce Andrew Conway, 24, of 1782 Bay, was sentenced to 90 days in jail for posession of a stolen drill from Sear's in Courtenay.

Mulligan said the drill was found in Conway's vehicle Nov. 8 by Courtenay RCMP, who discovered the $99.98 price tag still on it.

Conway was convicted of theft on July 17, 1978, in Victoria, when he received a 21-day jail term; July 25, 1975, in Winnipeg, when he received another 21-day sentence; Jan. 11, 1974, in Hamilton, when he received a 12-month sentence; and July 27, 1972, in Ontario, when he was also convicted of possesion of stolen property and five counts of breaking and entering for which he received five consecutive terms of three months each.

Fined $500 each for drinking-driving were: Paul Gregory Bruce, 18, of HMCS Terra Nova; Dale Frederick Stevens, 22, of 525 Comerford; and Ann Elizabeth Swan, 43, now living in Surrey.

Wednesday Mass Set For Priest

Requiem mass will be celebrated in Our Lady of the Rosary Church in Langford at 11 a.m. Wednesday for Father Hugh MacIsaac who died on the weekend at the age of 64.

Born in Phoenix in the southern B.C. interior where his Nova Scotia parents had taken up temporary residence, he went to Boston at an early age and attended elementary school there.

Later he took his philosophical studies at St. Francis Xavier University and his theology at Holy Heart Seminary.

Most of his work was in Vancouver where he established a reputation as a builder and organizer, as well as an air force chaplain, until a chronic heart condition forced him into semi-retirement on Florence Lake Road in Langford. He had been active in sports organizations.

His remains have been flown to Boston for burial in the family plot. Funeral services are being held there on Wednesday, and memorial services will be held simultaneously in Vancouver and Victoria.

Lougheed Cuts Oil Hike

come during the first six months next year.

Newfoundland's Frank Moores said he hopes a deal can be set before a three-day economic conference ends today. But he added he is not in favor of "political pauses" in the move towards higher prices.

Earlier Lougheed said Alberta and Ottawa have agreed on a plan to skip the Jan. 1 oil price increase of about three cents a gallon for gasoline and home-heating oil.

In return, the province will get $1 a barrel—three cents a gallon—increases next July 1 and again in January of 1980.

Lougheed said the agreement gives Alberta "two solid increases" rather than having to renegotiate the entire oil price deal next spring. And for the consuming provinces, it gives them a seven-month break from the steady rise towards world prices.

In addition, Ottawa has agreed to press on with its plan to ship more Alberta gas into markets in Quebec and the Maritime provinces.

The deal follows by two weeks the failure of Ottawa in a federal-provincial energy ministers meeting to gain support for its proposals to skip a Jan. 1 oil price increase.

The position of the provinces at that point was that an agreement providing for the increase was signed with Ottawa. A deal was a deal and it should go ahead.

But if a deal has been reached privately with Alberta, it would allow the major consuming provinces to go along with skipping the price increase.

The federal government says it feels there will not be room for an increase without putting the domestic oil price, currently $12.75 a barrel in Alberta, above the U.S. price, something prohibited by an agreement reached with Alberta 18 months ago.

But, in any case, says Ottawa, it is time for consumers to have a pause from the steady rise towards world prices that has been in effect since 1974.

Some of the provinces, however, say they feel the main motivation behind the Ottawa move is the expected spring federal general election.

The federal-provincial pricing agreement runs out in January and it was up for renegotiation next spring. But the deal would be stretched through until January of 1980 under the new price proposal.

In an interview following the conference, Gillespie would only say that the elements of an agreement had been reached. But he added that the federal government still stood behind its proposal of no price increase on Jan. 1.

of cuts in federal transfer payments that he said were costing his government money.

Finance Minister Jean Chretien, alternating between French and English, said in an impassioned speech that the federal government had done much to help the Quebec economy, including protection for the Quebec-based textile, clothing and shoe industry, incentives to the mining industry and designation of Montreal for federal grants.

"What do you want," he said. "We are not perfect." He said the federal government was willing to talk with the provinces.

Federal plans to change the unemployment insurance program came under fire from two provinces Monday, the only two that had a chance to speak on the matter before the economic conference of first ministers adjourned for the day.

Labor Minister Allan Williams of British Columbia complained that the changes, that will reduce weekly payments and tighten eligibility requirements, were decided upon by the federal government without consultation with the provinces.

Bernard Landry, Quebec's minister of state for economic development, complained that payments will be cut by $360 million in his province without any adequate compensation coming from other new initiatives.

Both men stressed the need for concerted action of the federal and provincial governments in the area of job creation.

Williams suggested that the provinces should have a greater role in job creation. He even proposed that the federal government transfer the administration of job creation programs to the provinces.

Losses Expected To Reach $18,000

The combined loss is expected to total close to $18,000 following two house fires in Saanich early today.

No one was injured in the fires which extensively damaged the rear of a house at 584 Brookleigh and gutted an outside studio building at 4578 Hughes.

The Brookleigh fire, spotted by a neighbor at 1:51 a.m., was caused by someone placing a paper bag containing fireplace ashes on top of a woodpile at the rear of the house.

Fire officials estimated $7,000 damage to the building and another $2,500 to contents.

The house is owned by Mervin Hunter.

Firemen are still investigating the cause of the Hughes fire which broke out shortly after 5 a.m. and quickly engulfed the small building resulting in a loss of about $8,000, including $3,000 in contents.

Trustees Study Costs Of French Programs

Greater Victoria school board will examine French programs in district schools.

The board Monday approved a committee to study existing French programs and come up with a development guideline.

Trustee Mark Fisher said the board should decide what kind of financial aid it is willing to give to French instruction.

He said the establishment of the education ministry's French core curriculum next fall in schools with sufficient demand is a good reason to examine existing French programs.

Fisher suggested the board decide how much it's willing to spend before considering the matching federal funds available.

The board dropped plans to expand this year its basic French program — which consists of 20 minutes of French a day in some Victoria schools — because federal grants weren't as much as expected.

The district offers three kinds of elementary French instruction: basic, immersion and partial immersion.

the gross national product—the value of all goods and services produced—would increase at up to five per cent.

At the same time, an inflation study centre report showed that Canadian manufacturers were raising prices and profits rapidly this year in spite of wage increase demands levelling off.

The centre, an adjunct of the Economic Council of Canada, pointed in particular to the food and beverage industry, steel and pulp and paper as having shown rapid price and profit increases.

It said that although profits may be recovering from a low level during the controls period, continued rises could set off another round of higher demands for wage increases and a new inflationary spiral.

It also said there were serious questions about whether manufacturers have not been using the advantage of the depreciated value of the dollar, which has raised the price of competitive imported goods, to expand their markets at home.

It suggested they had been instead raising their prices to the new higher level of the domestic imports, and taking higher profits.

"The centre wants particularly to urge Canadian firms which compete with imports to use the depreciation to expand their markets rather than raising their prices up to the higher import level," the study said.

Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said Monday he would refer recent increases in lumber prices to the anti-inflation board and the Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity for examination.

Allmand made the commitment after David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said the government should investigate profit increases by major lumber-producing corporations of up to 119 per cent and price rises for lumber of 45 to 65 per cent.

Orlikow noted that while the profit and price increases were high, allowable wage increases were six per cent this year.

He said that there were indications that housing starts would decline next year because of high costs of home construction and mortgages.

But Andre Ouellet, minister responsible for housing, said he expected there will not be a substantial decline in construction in 1979 and that the target of one million new homes in five years was well on the way to being met.

The annual rate of housing starts is now about 200,000.

SAANICH APPROVES REZONING BID

Saanich council Monday night approved rezoning of a 1.5-acre site bounded by Carey, Vernon and Douglas for construction of a shopping mall by Trafalgar Developments Inc.

The 16,000-square-foot development near Mount View high school will include four restaurants, two retail stores and a bank. Vehicular access will be via Vernon and Carey.

Although the shopping centre will be on the fringe of the proposed Saanich town centre between Vernon and Seymour, municipal planner Gil Laurenson said it would not jeopardize plans for the much larger commercial development.

The developer will be required to pay Saanich $20,000 for needed sewer improvements and $1,200 for storm drainage connections.

There were no objectors at the public hearing.

Council also gave zoning approval for construction of a single-storey development on Oak to house a wholesale bakery outlet and warehouse.

TRAVEL DEFICIT $1.4B IN FIRST 9 MONTHS

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians spent $1.4 billion more travelling abroad in the first nine months of this year than foreigners spent in Canada, Statistics Canada reported today.

The figures indicate there is likely to be little, if any, over-all improvement this year in the total deficit incurred by travel spending.

Last year, the travel deficit in the first nine months was $1.3 billion and the final total for all of 1977 was $1.7 billion.

The travel deficit has been a major problem for the deficit in international balance of payments which in turn has contributed to the weakening of the dollar's value abroad.

In the third quarter of 1978, the travel deficit was $46 million.

While that was an improvement over the 1977 third-quarter deficit of $122 million, it is a reversal of the long tradition of surpluses usually registered in the July-to-September summer vacation period.

There was a strong gain in receipts from countries other than the U.S.—to $332 million in the third quarter from $213 million in the second quarter and $223 million in the third quarter of 1977.

Receipts from U.S. visitors totalled $800 million, up from $406 million in the second quarter and $756 million in the third quarter a year earlier.

Payments by Canadians abroad in the third quarter totalled $695 million in the U.S. and $483 million in other countries.

So far in 1978, $1,969 billion has been earned from foreigners visiting Canada, up 14.9 per cent a year ago, while Canadians have spent a total $3.356 billion abroad, an increase of 10.9 per cent from 1977.

The decline of the dollar has made travel abroad more costly, while foreigners find trips to Canada cheaper.

Firm Fined in Death

TRAIL (CP) — The Workers' Compensation Board has fined Cominco Ltd. $10,000 following the death of David Ford, 20, who was electrocuted Sept. 10 while working in the lead smelter area at the company's plant in this southeast British Columbia city.

A Cominco spokesman confirmed Monday that the fine was imposed Thursday, the same day another worker was killed at the plant — the third in four months.

Larry Whyte, president of the United Steelworkers of America, local 480, said the fine was inadequate and that it won't solve the safety problems at the Cominco operation.

Cominco, which has refused comment on the fine, can appeal the board decision.

26 YEARS FOR MOUSETRAP

LONDON (Reuter) — Agatha Christie's The Mousetrap, the longest-running stage play of all time, celebrated its 26th birthday and 10,808th performance Saturday.

Since it opened here in 1952, about 4.5 million people have seen the play and it has become a tourist attraction on a par with the Tower of London and Buckingham Palace.

At least 150 actors and actresses have appeared in the play here and it has been presented in 41 countries and translated into 22 languages.

Agatha Christie, author of The Mousetrap" and many other famous detective stories, died in 1976 at the age of 85.

Got Heating Bill Blues? Get Advice . . . Free

By AB KENT
Times Staff

THE real chill from that frost on the roof hits home when the oil bill arrives.

A few days of sharply lower temperatures confirms the rising cost of keeping warm — even in temperate Victoria.

But how many people, helpless to do anything about fuel prices, know how to take advantage of money-saving methods of improving home and business energy efficiency, or to find out where to get free advice, or financial help?

Do-it-yourselfers are likely on top of the energy-saving game, with better home and business insulation and more efficient water and space-heating appliances.

But the rest of us need a starting point and some guidance on how to save on heating dollars.

Many inquiries go to Ted France, energy adviser to the B.C. ministry of energy, transport and communications, whose office gets phone requests for advice and sources of information.

France passes on suggestions on how to get material from appropriate sources and suggests inquiries should start with agencies already set up to deal with the public.

B.C. Hydro is one of these, together with federal services like CHIP (Canadian Home Insulation Program) and the Heat Line, a toll-free telephone link to the department of energy, mines and resources.

"There is great public interest in energy-saving," France said.

"There are many opportunities for economy, because it makes a lot of sense for people to use energy more efficiently.

"We are encouraged that people are interested and willing to do something about it," he said.

Industrial and commercial enterprises can get aid through a joint federal-provincial scanning program operated by the B.C. Energy Commission since September.

It involves a computerized energy bus which covers B.C. business, industrial and institutional structures with visits.

On request and free of charge, staff aboard the bus will monitor heat-loss and calculate technical details to upgrade insulation. The bus is now working on lower Vancouver Island.

Long-term programs will develop to provide a plan for the economic use of energy as technology improves and traditional sources change.

Meanwhile, consumers can take immediate steps to cut back or redirect energy needs while saving money.

They may start with advice on how to reduce waste at home by adopting good practices in use of electricity and heating fuel. The next step could be to install or upgrade building insulation, perhaps add a wood-burning stove, or the ultimate in supplemental heating — a solar collector or a heat pump.

If a typical B.C. family of four spends $400 a year for electricity alone, the addition of $300-$500 for oil or gas heating makes for a formidable total fuel bill.

But by economizing on room heating and by weatherstripping, insulating and giving the furnace proper maintenance, the saving on heating fuel can be up to 50 per cent.

Detailed information of this kind is available for the asking from any B.C. Hydro office, the federal energy, mines and resources department in Ottawa, the CHIP regional office PO Box 34180 Vancouver V6K 4N1 or phone collect 732-7295, or the Heat Line's toll-free Zenith 800-267-9563.

Consumers can learn how to obtain up to $350 for re-insulating pre-1946 houses and Hydro will explain how to get financing for insulation or installing thermal window glass of up to $500 at 10 per cent interest over two years paid through Hydro billing.

Similar information is available from any insulation or thermal window specialist or building supplier.

Persons interested in home solar projects may make valuable contacts through local chapters of the Solar Energy Society of Canada, whose spokesmen are Gil Parker, 2666 Quadra, 386-7643, or in Vancouver, Roger Bryanton, 1271 Howe, 689-1841.

Members of the society include architects, solar equipment manufacturers, engineers and designers familiar with the latest in commercial and home-made innovations for water and space heating.

Hydro has just published a new information kit for householders planning to build or renovate, covering all aspects of domestic energy including water heating, lighting and wiring, kitchen and laundry planning, heating systems and insulation, and solar energy.

IF a homeowner wants to know where and how badly heat is leaking out of his house, he can hire an infrared specialist to scan the building, a service which insulating firms may recommend.

Hydro has a similar, province-wide scheme under way in which whole communities are scanned by remote infrared sensor to show street by street which houses are poorly insulated. In three years, scanning aircraft are expected to heat-map every B.C. community.

In pursuit of long-term energy policy, the energy commission and Hydro are embarked on assessment of waste wood utilization, thermal coal power and geothermal energy sources.

France said B.C. is fortunate in having its own or nearby sources of oil, natural gas and hydroelectric power, giving it a better energy future than many parts of the world.

Instead of pressure to convert wind, solar or tidal energy, B.C. will probably become a leading developer of electricity through waste wood utilization, which is subject of joint research by the energy commission, federal energy, Hydro and the Council of Forest Industries.

Computerized energy bus dispenses dollar-saving advice

Priority in Hiring For City Drivers

Local bus drivers laid off as a result of the sale of part of Pacific Coach Lines will be given hiring priority for Gray Line tour buses under new Seattle ownership.

Grayline of Seattle Inc. manager Edward Cedergren said today experienced Victoria drivers will be the first interviewed when hiring starts in February.

"We want good, experienced drivers and they will be the first people we will talk to."

Cedergren was responding to fears expressed by Pacific Coach Lines drivers that as many as 59 drivers might be laid off because parts of the bus company have been sold.

Cedergren said it would be a natural move for his company to approach experienced drivers who are laid off and offer them jobs on the tourist buses.

The hiring would be done by a Canadian management team which he will appoint over the winter.

He said purchase of Gray Line will be completed about Feb. 1 and hiring will start. Drivers would be needed for between 25 and 30 buses, he said.

Cedergren will sell package tours in Seattle, including tickets on the Marguerite and bus tours from dockside. The package will include admission to local attractions.

"This (bus line) purchase was a natural for us because we have been in the tourist business in Seattle for many years," he said.

The Victoria package tours will be organized at headquarters in Victoria and sold in a number of cities besides Seattle, Cedergren said.

Cedergren repeated an earlier pledge that all management and employees of the Victoria company will be Canadian despite the fact it will be owned by Americans.

There are 80 year-round drivers with Pacific Coach Lines plus about 40 seasonal drivers.

2,000 Eye Jobs, Only 288 Hired At Post Office

The post office has selected 288 seasonal workers from 2,000 applicants to help with Christmas mail, which is already starting to flow through the Royal Oak plant.

"We will put 55 of them to work this week and most of the others will be needed early in December," post office information officer Buz Sawyer said.

"On Monday we handled almost 700,000 pieces of mail, up about 160,000 from an average Monday. Most of this was early Christmas mail for overseas."

Sawyer said there were a large number of cards and parcels destined for Australia as well as the usual high pile for the United Kingdom.

"We are handling a lot of parcels with Christmas stickers on them so the seasonal rush is under way."

The number of cards may be lower than usual, however, if the early trend continues.

In previous years, postal workers would see bundles of 50 or more Christmas cards tied together but this year so far the largest bundles have only about 25 cards.

"Maybe the price of cards and stamps is forcing people to be more selective."

The search for Christmas help began at the Canada Employment Centre one month ago when more than 2,000 applied for the jobs.

The CEC reduced this total to 305, most with experience in seasonal post office work, who were then interviewed by the post office.

From this total, 288 were selected which will be the maximum number hired. Last year just over 200 found work.

A maximum of 223 would be needed in the Royal Oak plant and up to 65 more might be hired at the downtown post office building at 1230 Government. Most of the seasonal workers will be sorters.

They are paid $3.60 an hour for inside work, $3.85 for outside.

In 1976 the Victoria post office hired 600 seasonal workers but that was before the introduction of mail sorting machines at the Royal Oak centre. Now the total is reduced to one-third, just over 200.

Sawyer said experienced postal workers get priority for the Christmas rush because of the short time they are employed. An untrained employee is just learning the job by the time the Christmas rush is over.

Ask the Times

Q. Why does the island of Greenland have such a name when it lies in the Arctic and 85 per cent of it is covered in thick ice? D.P.

A. Viking explorers gave the island its name in the hope of attracting settlers even though only the coastal areas are green in the short summer. The population remains small because of the island's cold climate and few natural resources.

Q. We hear so much about the price of gold these days. Can you tell me when it was first discovered? E.S.

A. This is not known but gold cups and jewelry made as early as 3500 B.C. have been dug up at Ur in Mesopotamia (now Iraq). The skilled craftsmanship in the gold objects indicates the craft of working gold had been developed hundreds of years before they were made.

Q. Can you tell me how many fairy tales the Danish author Hans Christian Andersen wrote? N.M.

A. He published his first fairy tale in 1835 and had written 168 by the time he died 40 years later.

SUSPECT HELD IN CITY

City police have a 24-year-old man in custody following an attempted robbery in James Bay Monday afternoon.

The man was to have appeared in provincial court later today.

Police picked up the suspect a half hour after the owner of the Corner Confectionery, 501 Government, reported a man had demanded money.

When the clerk replied he had no money, and opened the till to prove it, the man fled.

In another incident Monday a bomb threat was phoned to the Princess Mary Restaurant, 344 Harbour, at about 10 a.m. Police arrested a 16-year-old boy about an hour later. The boy has been charged with making threats by telephone.

Police have had less success in solving the theft of about $2,500 from the Belfry theatre Sunday night.

The money, about $1,500 in cash and the rest in cheques, was kept in a cash box in a padlocked locker in the Belfry office, and went missing during a post-performance party ending the run of the musical Piaf.

Artistic director Don Shipley said the money, much of it raised in a $25-a-ticket benefit performance that evening, had been expected to keep the theatre going after a promised government grant failed to materialize.

Long-Gone John Back from Space

Rhyming weather forecaster John Thomas, relegated to a back room role in the Atmospheric Environment Service for his lighthearted approach to weather reporting, will have a chance next month to once again wax lyrical for the Victoria area.

Thomas will be back at his old oratorical stand for three weeks while Patricia Bay airport forecaster Norman Dressler is on vacation Dec. 14-Jan. 7.

Editors and radio listeners welcomed the rhyming forecasts composed in Vancouver by Thomas to enliven the often dull, frequently wet, shape of west coast weather.

But a staid AES seems to feel there is a fine line between brightening and flippancy, and Thomas was sent into the satellite imagery interpretation section.

Saanich police are keeping one jump ahead of persistent speeders in the technology race.

Inspector Ted Owens says the department has just received a hand-held radar unit which can be used in any direction and operated either from a vehicle power source or independently from its own power pack dry-cell battery.

Better still (from the police point of view, if not the speed merchants') the gizmo is designed to thwart radar detection devices mounted in private vehicles.

As Owens puts it in an official memo: "The unit does not emit a signal until you pull the trigger, at which time the speed is recorded and it is too late for the violator to slow down in order to avoid detection."

Sneaky, fellas, just plain sneaky.

The Yellowhead What!? Come Off It

Fighting words from astrologer and naturalist Dr. Jeremy Tatum of the University of Victoria.

He says the B.C. fish and wildlife branch is all wet when it comes to natural history and is in over its neck when it talks about raising the level of Thetis Lake.

(The raising project would supposedly help cutthroat trout in Craigflower Creek).

Wildlife official Chris Dodd defended the project, saying among other things that it would benefit the yellowhead blackbird which nests around the lake.

Harrumph! snorts Tatum, the yellowhead blackbird does not in fact occur here on Vancouver island.

If that's the kind of reasoning behind the lake-raising proposal, says Tatum, it's time an ecological study was carried out before anyone does anything to the lake.

"It is evident," says Tatum, "that the government officials do not know a yellowhead blackbird from a hole in the ground."

Uncertainty over government funding has forced members of the Handicapped Action Committee to launch a fund-raising campaign in the community.

Spokesperson Ellie Bowerman says the group is concentrating on churches and service clubs and hopes to raise enough pledges to cover the $200-a-month rent for the committee's office at 521-620 View.

Ellie says the pitch is being made personally by committee members. None of that appeal-by-mail approach for them.

She says the group will seek advice from Housing Minister Hugh Curtis on how to get further funding.

The appointment of Martin O'Connell as labor minister in the Trudeau cabinet last week brought reminiscences about his family's early ties with Victoria. Some oldtimers may remember the O'Connell family growing up at Killarney Cottage on Glanford Avenue.

The house — his father was from Killarney, Ireland, and Mrs. O'Connell was of Irish descent from Ontario — is still there.

O'Connell grew up in Saanich and went to Mount View High, later served in the Second World War and came back to study to be a teacher. Before he went into politics back east, he was on the faculty of the University of Toronto.

He has a brother, Monsignor Michael O'Connell, who is known locally for his work with Bishop Remi De Roo, and two sisters, none of whom live in the Victoria area anymore.

TOWN TALK

Maybe the Gulf Islanders are better with the tongue twisters, particularly after a night of the bubbly.

But regional district executive director Dennis Young — stone sober — recently had some trouble pronouncing the name of the inn at Port Browning on North Pender Island.

It's the SH-QU-ALA.

The inn asked for — and received — agreement from the board to to tell the Liquor Administration Branch that it favors allowing the inn to extend its hours from 11:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays.

Said regional board chairman Jim Campbell, "It's easier to pronounce at 11 p.m."

There are still several beautiful sea-view luxury apartment homes left in this exceptional development

Overlooking Oak Bay and the Oak Bay Marina, The Newport Beach is an intimate building of only 23 suites - each one private, spacious and secure, built with all the extra design features and meticulous craftsmanship that typify all of Park Pacific's many fine projects.

If you've been thinking about moving up to The Newport Beach, now is the time. A building of this quality, in such an exclusive location, will not be duplicated again in Victoria.

Look for the classic blue canopy at 1375 Newport Avenue.

Mine Industry Review urges

EDMONTON (CP) — The federal department of Indian and northern affairs should undertake a major review of the administration of mineral exploration in the North, says a report just released.

The report, commissioned by the department, was prepared by the Centre for Resource Studies at Queen's University in Kingston and presented here to a government-industry meeting.

It says communications with the industry must be made more effective. Regulations should be more flexible and the department should have regular reviews of the regulatory process.

The report agrees with many of the complaints by the industry about the inefficiency of the administration of regulations.

It says application requirements are not understood and the process is unnecessarily complex, leading to industry suspicion about department personnel.

"There are apparently unnecessary delays in granting permits."

It also says blanket conditions prohibiting all damage to the land surface are "plainly excessive" and it calls for division of the North into distinct ecological regions with varying restrictions.

The report says one mining company project was delayed by almost six months after it was suspected that peregrine falcons inhabited the area.

"The relationship between the industry and parts of the department is generally adversarial rather than co-operative," the report says.

It is also critical of the department itself, saying the relationships between staff are ambiguous and the authority of some staff is badly defined.

The report was presented by William Irvine, newly-appointed special adviser on mining to Hugh Faulkner, northern affairs minister.

Written Suspensions Of Drivers Essential

OTTAWA (CP) — In a decision that could have far-reaching affects, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled Monday that Alberta drivers must be informed in writing that their driving privileges have been suspended after convictions of drunken driving.

The high court made the ruling in upholding a judgment of the Alberta Court of Appeal which acquitted Garry Mudryk of Valleyfield, Alta., of a charge of driving while his licence was suspended.

Mudryk's defence was that he didn't know his licence was suspended. He wasn't asked to turn in his licence, nor given any notice by the court that it was suspended.

While the Supreme Court decision dealt only with Alberta traffic laws, court observers said it could apply to all other provinces which do not now issue written notices to drivers whose licences are suspended under the same section of the Criminal Code.

The court reserved judgment on another appeal also dealing with persons driving while their licences were suspended.

Joseph Baril of Clearwater, B.C., and William James Prue of Kamloops were acquitted by the B.C. Court of Appeal of charges of driving after being convicted of drunk driving offences.

The B.C. traffic laws call for automatic suspension of driving licences after such convictions but both Baril and Prue said they didn't know that.

They said they were not informed that they could not drive and were entitled to the defence that persons should not be held liable for serious crimes unless it is proven that they knew or should have known they were doing wrong.

Lawyers for the province argued that the defence was not an excuse for traffic offences. They said B.C. law called for an automatic suspension after convictions of drunk driving and Baril and Prue should have known that.

Defence lawyer Brian Crane referred to a recent Supreme Court decision which said that offences in everyday matters such as minor traffic offences and violations of drinking laws cannot be defended with a plea of not knowing about them.

But in matters under the Criminal Code the Crown must prove that the accused knew he was doing wrong, Crane said.

Status Group Says Ottawa Discouraging Wives From Job Market

OTTAWA (CP) — Th. National Action Committee on the Status of Women has accused the federal government of deliberately discouraging married women from seeking work.

In a brief prepared for a Commons committee studying proposed amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act, the group charges the government with basing the new regulations on the idea that women were secondary wage earners.

It challenged Employment Minister Bud Cullen to "produce evidence that the existence of unemployment insurance benefits had encouraged women to enter the labor force."

Last week, the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women also said the new unemployment insurance regulations are discriminatory.

The council said the proposed reduction in the benefit rate "will penalize most severely those already penalized by the job market — and the majority of them are women."

Arms to S. Africa Probe Report Ready

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP hopes to complete by Thursday its year-long investigation into alleged illegal arms shipments to South Africa, says an RCMP spokesman.

He said Monday the force has looked into charges that arms made by Space Research Corp. of Highwater, Que., have gone to South Africa.

The result of the investigation will be passed on to Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais.

Earlier, Blais refused to comment on the RCMP findings until the investigation is complete.

Joshua Nkomo, a black guerrilla leader seeking to overthrow the Rhodesian government, said when he was in Ottawa a year ago that arms were being shipped illegally to Rhodesia through Saint John, N.B. He said the arms made their way to Rhodesia through South Africa.

An RCMP investigation began at the time and later stories linked the alleged illegal shipments to Space Research Corp., which denied it was doing anything illegal. The arms were allegedly being shipped to South Africa through Antigua where Space Research has a test site.

A spokesman for the company said earlier this month that Space Research shipped 12,988 inert 155-millimetre artillery shell casings to Spain last July and whether they were used in Spain or elsewhere was beyond the company's control.

The CBC program, Fifth Estate, alleged the company shipped inert artillery shells to Spain which ended up in South Africa.

Space Research repeated denials that it has shipped arms to South Africa against a United Nations arms embargo.

Cross Not Bitter

QUEBEC (CP) — James Cross says he holds no bitterness towards the members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec who kidnapped and held him for 61 days in 1970.

But the former British trade commissioner to Montreal said in a copyright interview published today in Le Soleil—the third in a series—that he had problems with Louise Cossette-Trudel, the wife of Jacques Cossette-Trudel.

"She became hostile towards me," Cross told British journalist Barrie Penrose in London, "but I don't know why."

The former diplomat said that apart from the attitude of Louise Cossette-Trudel, his kidnappers only got hostile with him once.

That was when he misspelled two words in a letter he had written, and the kidnappers thought he was trying to communicate something to the authorities.

During the first few days of his confinement, Cross discussed the political aims of his kidnappers with them.

Although the atmosphere was never completely relaxed and certainly not friendly, Cross and his kidnappers sometimes talked about other things.

One day they watched on television the film Odd Man Out, in which James Mason plays the role of a member of the Irish Republican Army pursued by the police.

During a discussion which followed, Cross, who is a Protestant from Northern Ireland, told the others that the coming of independence in southern Ireland had not turned it into a paradise, and certainly not a Marxist state. In his opinion, Eire was a bourgeois state independent of England.

Everyone got hot under the collar and the discussion turned to other subjects, Cross said.

He said he was well cared for in the east-end Montreal apartment where he was kept blindfolded most of the time.

He was fed regularly and supplied with a medicine he needed to control hypertension.

"Oh, they wanted me to survive," said Cross. "I was their only trump."

Good Faith Queried In Bay Takeover Bid

MONTREAL (CP) — In the continuing battle for control of Simpsons Ltd., company chairman Allan Burton brought into question Monday the good faith of Hudson's Bay Co. president Donald McGiverin.

Burton implied in a carefully-worded statement that McGiverin had misinformed Simpsons shareholders on the question of whether or not the Bay would assume a passive role on the Simpsons-Sears Ltd. board if its bid for Simpsons succeeds.

Simpsons-Sears Ltd. is offering $6.75 per share for Simpsons Ltd. holdings while the Bay is offering the equivalent of $8.27 per share.

McGiverin later denied from his Toronto offices that he had misinformed anyone.

"It seems to me to be inconceivable that the shareholders of the Bay would be satisfied that their management would not have a voice in a company in which the Bay would have an investment in the order of $250 million," said Burton.

He was referring to reports, confirmed by McGiverin, that his company could assume a passive role on the Simpsons-Sears board if its bid for control of Simpsons Ltd. succeeds.

Simpsons owns a 50 per cent voting interest of Simpsons-Sears. The remainder is held by Chicago-based retailing giant Sears, Roebuck and Co.

One can question "if this information is intentional and if it doesn't have the object of misinforming the shareholders of Simpsons," Burton said.

In a telephone interview from Toronto, McGiverin replied: "It's a bona fide offer involving many millions of dollars. I wouldn't consider misleading anyone."

The Bay mailed a formal offer to approximately 17,175 shareholders Monday. The offer, which expires in 20 days, is conditional on the Bay's obtaining at least 60 per cent of Simpsons Ltd. stock.

The Simpsons-Sears offer to merge with Simpsons was announced in mid-August.

Should the Bay succeed, it would become the top non-food retailer in Canada with combined annual sales of about $4.4 billion. The company would control about 43 per cent of the trade.

THE 1979 MAZDA GLC COSTS LESS THAN THE RABBIT.
AND THERE ARE MORE REASONS TO BUY IT THAN A HONDA.

If you're considering buying an economical car, there are a lot of choices these days.

You can start at the high-price end and look at a VW Rabbit. Or you can look at a car like the Honda Civic. It costs less than the Rabbit and it gives you less.

And then, you can look at the 1979 Mazda GLC. The GLC is in the same price range as the Civic. But what's surprising is that the GLC comes close to matching the Rabbit which is out of its price class.

Let's look at the main points.

Besides being economical on gas, a good economy car should also give you a decent-sized engine.

Both the GLC and the Rabbit do.

In fact, all 1979 GLC's have a new higher performance 1400 cc overhead cam piston engine which gives improved acceleration, more pulling power and quieter operation.

All that the Honda Civic regular sedan and regular hatchback give you is a small 1200 cc engine.

Also, the ideal economy car shouldn't cramp people into a tiny space. Look at the GLC and the Rabbit, both of them give you roomy interiors.

But look at the Civic, it only gives you a tight-fitting 74 cubic feet of passenger and cargo space. It doesn't compare with GLC's 86 cubic feet.

Another area where the Civic falls short compared to the GLC and Rabbit is visibility. The GLC has 43% more window area than the Civic.

And when it comes to our standard features, the GLC gives you many the Civic and even the Rabbit don't.

Neither the Rabbit nor the Civic give you split rear seats, electric hatch release, rear window wiper and washer or a jump-forward device in the front seat. These are all standard on the GLC Deluxe.

The GLC Deluxe also gives you at no extra cost, power assisted front disc brakes, tinted windows, locking gas cover, trip odometer, wall-to-wall cut-pile carpeting, a velour interior with specific exterior colours, fully reclining bucket seats and protective body moulding. All standard.

And there's something else the GLC gives you the Rabbit and the Civic don't. More choice in body style. The GLC hatchback comes in 2 and 4-door models, there's a 5-speed Sport, a 4-door wagon.

So as you can see, in 1979 you can pay more to get more car, you can pay less to get a lot less car, or you can pay less and get more car.

The wisest choice is obvious.

French Liner Eyeing Monreal Berth

MONTREAL (CP) — Speculation that the retired luxury liner S. S. France might launch a new life in Montreal harbor is "premature," federal Public Works Minister Andre Ouellet says.

Ouellet confirmed in an interview published today that there have been preliminary discussions with representatives of the ship's owner, who wants to dock the ship permanently here as a combination hotel and exposition hall for French products.

But he added the project was still in planning stages.

A spokesman for Ahkram Ojjeh, the Arab businessman who bought the France in 1974, said in Paris during the weekend that agreement was near with the City of Montreal to bring the ship up the St. Lawrence River by as early as next summer.

But a city spokesman denied Monday that any agreement had been reached and added Montreal would not participate in the "strictly private" project.

The 2,000-passenger transoceanic liner, launched in the early 1960s as the queen of the French merchant fleet, would apparently dock near Montreal's old quarter where Ottawa has begun a major urban renewal project.

Meanwhile, local hotel operators fear their business may sink if the France puts into Montreal.

10,000 Say Charge Police

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Civil Liberties Association says it has more than 10,000 signatures on a petition to have legal action taken against Mounties who have allegedly violated the law.

The association, recirculating the petition this month, says that although allegations against the RCMP of burglary, theft, arson, mail-opening and other offences have been made since October, 1977, "not a single charge has been laid or disciplinary measure taken."

The petition urges the federal government to invoke at once "the normal processes of law enforcement."

It says Ottawa should initiate prosecutions or disciplinary proceedings in federal matters such as mail-opening and alleged RCMP misleading of federal cabinet ministers. Evidence of break-ins, theft, arson and other offences should be referred to provincial attorneys-general for action.

A royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing "must no longer be used as the excuse for delay and inaction," the association says.

The royal commission, appointed July 6, 1977, has been investigating the allegations for more than a year but is not expected to report before 1980.

In its November newsletter, the association says it soon will present a brief to the royal commission. It has invite members to help by setting out their views on police powers — are they too extensive or too limited? — or by giving examples of RCMP wrongdoing which haven't yet surfaced at the royal commission heaings.

It has also asked members to "identify any categories of people who should receive especially harsh or lenient treatment" as a result of RCMP wrongdoing.

Grain Deal Signed

OTTAWA (CP) — Poland will be able to buy an additional 700,000 metric tons of grain next year under an agreement signed Monday by Wheat Board Minister Otto Lang and Stanislaw Pawlak, Poland's ambassador to Canada. That brings to 3.1 million metric tons the amount of bread wheat, Durum wheat, barley and oats.

Exiting Que. Firms Cost 15,000 Jobs?

MONTREAL (CP) — Some 15,000 Quebec jobs have been lost during the last three years because of decisions by companies to leave the province, a report by the provincial Liberal party says.

Compiled by Liberal national assembly member Reed Scowen and released Monday, the report says 42 Canadian companies decided to move part or all of their operations out during the last three years, causing the elimination of at least 5,500 jobs.

But Statistics Canada estimates that for each job lost in a pullout, another two are indirectly sacrificed, Scowen said.

"This means that the departure of business activity from Quebec has involved the loss of about 15,000 jobs in the past 36 months," he said at a news conference.

Scowen added, however, that the figures were incomplete because many executives were reluctant to discuss moving.

The report calls for the creation of a government commission to observe head office movements and propose ways to keep them from leaving.

It also suggests that companies evaluate social and political implications of a move.

Liberal leader Claude Ryan said earlier this month a government cannot force companies to stay, although it "should work to create a favorable climate that can motivate them to stay in Quebec."

In September Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin said a study being prepared by the Quebec government shows no more than 10 important head offices have moved since 1976.

Scowen, who represents the Montreal riding of Notre Dame de Grace, said most companies have been intimidated by the adverse publicity surrounding decisions by Sun Life Assurance Co. and Cadbury-Schweppes Powell Ltd. to leave Quebec.

"As a result, most moves are made so as to avoid publicity," he said.

Huge Loss If Payoffs Made?

TORONTO (CP) — An accountant told the dredging fraud conspiracy trial Monday that McNamara Corp. would have lost $400,000 on a job at Toronto harbor in 1973-74 if the firm had made bid-rigging payoffs which prosecution witnesses said were promised on the project.

Ronald R. Finch, of Price Waterhouse and Co. chartered accountants, testified that McNamara bid $1.7 million for the dredging job and made a profit of $867,000.

The Toronto-based McNamara Corp. would have lost $400,000 on the job if it had paid $1 million to J. P. Porter Co. Ltd. and $215,000 to Peter Kiewit Sons (Toronto) Co. Ltd., Finch said.

N.B. Blacked Out

FREDERICTON (CP) — Much of New Brunswick was hit by a power blackout Monday afternoon.

The problem involved an overheated transformer at nearby Keswick, a major termin l in the distribution network for the New Brunswick Electric Power Commis sion, a utility spokesman said.

Temperatures were about -10 Celsius in many areas at the time.

Commission spokesman Scott Webster said most of the province was affected shortly before 4 p.m. and two hours later many areas were still without service while power supplies were sporadic to other centres, including Fredericton.

Most of Moncton was without power for at least 40 minutes.

In Saint John service was being provided by the Courtney Bay generating facility and the Campbellton-Dalhousie area was being supplied through a connection with Hydro Quebec lines.

The blackout also affected communications systems to and from Nova Scotia, including computerized systems such as those used by Air Canada for its reservations service.

A short-circuit at the Keswick terminal knocked out power in New Brunswick Nov. 14. That failure caused overloads that tripped safety systems in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

The Nov. 14 blackouts lasted from a few minutes in some communities to a couple of hours in others.

Transport Dept. Wastes Plugged

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang said Monday his department has plugged nearly every accounting irregularity identified by Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell in his annual report released last week.

Lang told the Commons many examples of soaring airport construction costs named by the auditor-general occurred several years ago.

"In virtually every case, procedures have been put in place to try and make sure that whatever may have led to the problem in the first instance could not occur again," Lang said.

He was responding to a series of questions from Conservative MPs about deficiencies in financial planning by the transport department that were cited by Macdonell.

Lang told Jack Murta (PC—Lisgar) there now is a complete double check with airport users before expansion plans are approved.

However, he conceded his department had failed to adopt more stringent procedures in the first place.

SPARKY ANDERSON

Sparky Axed by Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds, apparently surprised both the man hired and the man fired today when they fired Sparky Anderson and replaced him with John McNamara.

Reds president Dick Wagner said he went to Anderson's California home Monday and informed him of the decision which he said had been made only the day before.

"I think he was generally surprised, but he accepted like a gentleman," Wagner said.

"The past two years have been good ones by the standards of most clubs," Wagner said in a prepared statement. "But we are determined to set a higher standard. It is our decision that the move we make is in the over-all best interest of making the Cincinnati Reds a better team.

The Reds have finished second in the National League West Division in the last two years after winning two successive world championships.

McNamara, who was signed to a one-year contract, previously managed San Diego Padres and Oakland A's and has been in the major league as manager or coach for the last 11 years. He was third base coach for California Angels this year and is currently managing the Licey team in the Dominican Republic winter league.

"Twenty four hours ago I was throwing batting practice in the Dominican Republic," McNamara said. "I'm flabbergasted to have such an opportunity like this."

Anderson was manager of the Reds for nine years beginning in 1970 and under his guidance the Reds won two world championships, four National League titles and five division titles. He has one year remaining on his contract and will be asked to do special assignments for the Reds.

All Hail The Eskimos And Seahawks Too

Okay, so the Alouettes didn't win the Grey Cup. A guy is entitled to be wrong once in five years. Sure, I gave you four points and I'm glad you didn't phone. Too late!

But the way the Eskimos won Football's Holy Grail was certainly convincing enough even if the issue wasn't decided until very late in the fourth quarter. It was that kind of a game right until the end when Dave Cutler kicked it out of reach with his fourth field goal.

And it was suprising too that Cutler didn't get the award as the top Canadian. Of course, football selectors across the country have gotten so used to Cutler booting field goals from all angles, that now it is expected of him. But after all, Cutler did account for 14 of Edmonton's 20 points which isn't bad for a Sunday afternoon's work.

Still, they gave the award to Angelo Santucci. Before the game, many people were probably saying Angelo who? Maybe some still are. But Santucci, when he got his chance, proved worthy enough. He caught five passes for 25 yards and ran for another 30. And perhaps the Alouettes were caught out by the subterfuge. That was Santucci's key role.

The Als weren't too intersested in Santucci after Don Warrington went out hurting. Jim Germany was the man they were keying on. And that's where quarterback Tom Wilkinson earned his honors as the game most valuable player on offence. He didn't do the obvious. Which is why Santucci stood out.

As for the game — a quick start, a couple of early breaks, the Eskimos had the lead and the Alouettes were forced to play catch-up. Not that they didn't give it a good try. They did, and maybe only fell one or two plays short. One of those might have been enough.

It was still anyone's game late into the fourth quarter when defensive tackle Glen Weir of the Als barely missed getting his hands on an errant Wilkinson toss. And with the score 17-10 at the time and the Als already having come from behind a 17-3 deficit, Edmonton fans weren't breathing easily. But the big chance was gone, a possible touchdown lost and Don Sweet ended up by kicking a field goal a few plays later. Not enough.

That was the Als' last gasp as it turned out.

Before then it was also a game of defence and the Esks had more than the Als figured. The Als thought they could run on the Eskimos. But the Edmonton defence rose to the occasion and shut down the Als best offensive weapons. That was what really stymied the Montreal offence. On the other hand, the Esks found they could run on the Als. So it was turnabout.

Edmonton coach Hughie Campbell's fake field goal early in the game was straight out of Seattle's and Monday night football's bag of tricks, and what a time to use it! With the nation's best place kicker, Cutler, on the line and three points almost a certainty, who would would be looking at fakery that early in the contest? And it goes against the grain too. You don't gamble when you are ahead. But maybe you should. The Alouettes certainly were caught with their basics showing. It led to a touchdown; and, in this book, that was the play of the game.

It was an excellent contest with the result in doubt for the longest time. They say it wasn't a classic, but what is a classic? The Eskimos, whether they admit it or not, were hungry for this one after last year's battering. They played like it and deserved it. And I still think Cutler should have received the Canadian award.

Meanwhile, down south in Oakland, the Seattle Seahawks were doing something that was semi-classical. They were beating the Oakland Raiders for the second time this season and that made news. It also put the Seahawks, in their third year in the NFL, in playoff contention. They now are 7-6 and only a game behind Oakland and Denver in the West.

And the way quarterback Jim Zorn did it kept video viewers on the edge of their seats, as he so often does. Just as Wilkinson did the unexpected with a Zorn-type pass to fool the Alouettes early, Zorn, with the Seahawks trailing 16-14, needing a yard on fourth down, only 22 seconds to play and no time outs remaining, came up with a new wrinkle late.

With everyone expecting a pass, the receiver running out of bounds (how else do you stop the clock?) and the TV announcers assuring everyone that was the only play he could call, Zorn called a running play. Presto! A five-yard gain, a first down, the Seawhawks in range of their field goal kicker, Efren Herrera . . . and, well, you know the rest. Herrera kicked the winning field goal from 46 yards to give the Seahawks a 17-16 victory.

And hey, now, is there a Bowl winner hereabouts?

Not likely, not yet, because when you live by the pass, as the Seawhawks do, you also die by the pass; and there's a long way to go.

But Zorn and the Seahawks certainly have added a new dimension to the NFL this year, and it's interesting and entertaining, win or lose. Edmonton coach Hughie Campbell should buy that, which includes the part he pilfered in the first place.

OILERS' OWNER RESCUES SERIES

EDMONTON (CP) — The World Hockey Association today confirmed that it has reached agreement with amateur hockey organizations and a series of international games in Canada and the United States will be played as scheduled.

The agreement ends a lengthy dispute over the signing of under-age players by some WHA teams.

Cancellation of the international games was averted by the personal intervention of Edmonton Oilers' owner Peter Pocklington.

Terms of the final agreement were not disclosed but the Oilers said the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has agreed to give its official sanction to the games.

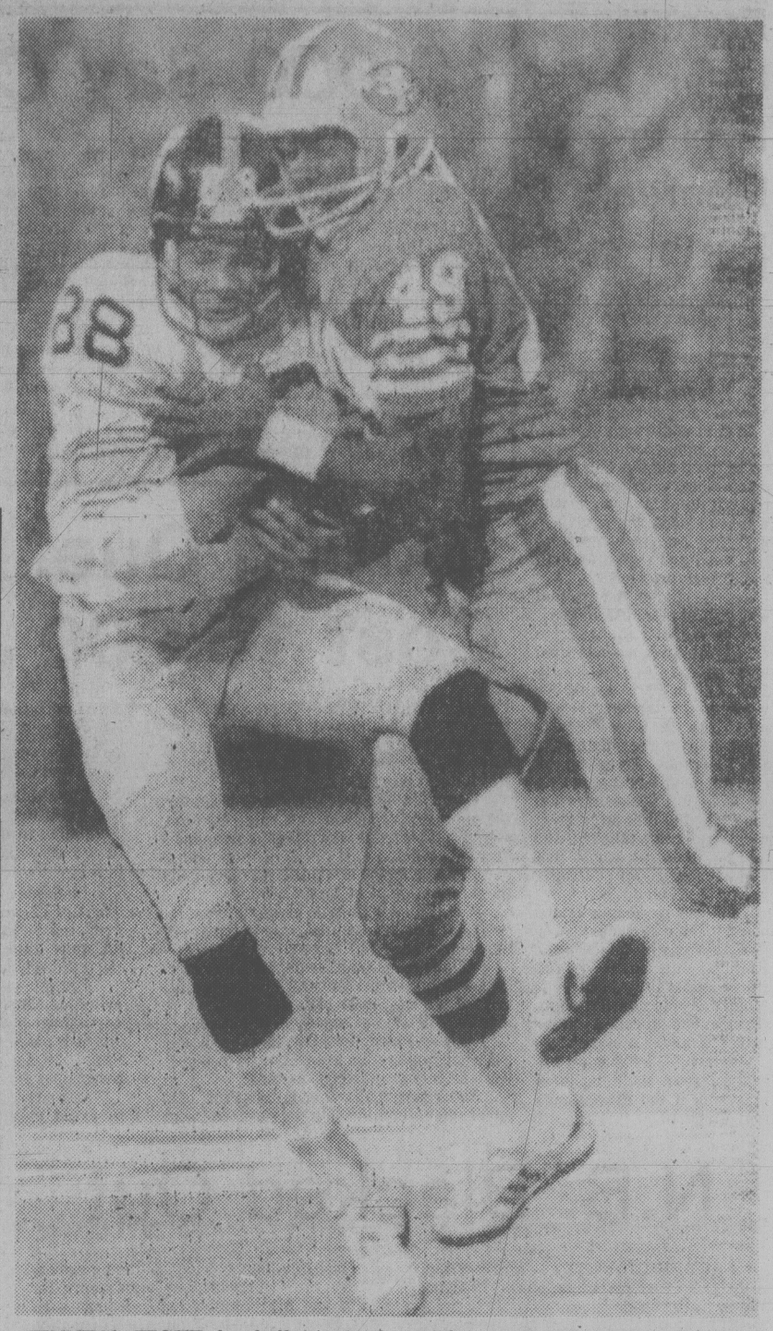
Ed Chynoweth, executive director of Canada's major junior hockey leagues, who received a cheque for an undisclosed amount from Pocklington, said the Edmonton owner became involved when it was apparent the games would be cancelled otherwise.

"I have no doubt there would be no international games had Peter Pocklington not come forward and reached a settlement our people can live with," Chynoweth said. "He carried the whole WHA ship."

Pocklington, who wouldn't say how much money he paid out, said he got involved to save the series and the integrity of the WHA.

"I got involved for two reasons: financial and because the integrity of the league was at stake. We agreed last year to the $150,000 bond for signing under-age players and I can't believe our league wouldn't fulfill its obligations."

The agreement means the international games—eight in Edmonton—will be played as scheduled beginning Dec. 14. It includes a three-game series in Edmonton Jan. 2-4-5 between the WHA all-star team and a strengthened Moscow Dynamo club.



WINNING FIGHT for ball in Monday night's National Football League game between Pittsburgh and San Francisco '49ers is wide receiver Lynn Swann of Steelers, who battles Vern Robertson (49). Swann caught five passes for 88 yards and scored two touchdowns in 24-7 Pittsburgh victory.

Islanders Climbing At Blistering Pace

MONTREAL (CP) — New York Islanders, with a 10-game undefeated streak and the National Hockey League's best home record, have moved within a point of league-leading Atlanta Flames, and the Islanders have three games in hand on the Flames.

The Islanders, only team to have gone undefeated at home this season, have posted an enviable record at Nassau Veterans Memorial Coliseum in their last 32 regular-season dates. Since Jan. 3, the Islanders have won 25 games, lost one and tied six at home. The loss, last March 18, was inflicted by Atlanta.

The Islanders have outscored their opposition 48-24 at home this season and 154-81 at home since Jan. 3, the league noted today in its weekly release of official statistics.

Defenceman Denis Potvin of the Islanders, winner of the James Norris Memorial Trophy as the league's best rearguard last season, has been one of the biggest contributors to his team's success. Potvin, sixth in the individual scoring race with 29 points, has been held pointless in only four of the team's 20 games.

The trio of Doug Soetaert, John Davidson and Wayne Thomas of New York Rangers continues to lead the Vezina Trophy race with a goals-against average of 2.50.

Meanwhile, in another NHL development, rookie centre Bill Derlago underwent surgery for torn knee ligaments and will be lost to Vancouver Canucks for a minimum of three months.

Derlago was injured Saturday against New York when hip-checked by Denis Potvin of the Islanders at the New York blue line.

Rick Blight, sent to Dallas a week ago by the Canucks, was recalled Monday by Vancouver and will report to the team in St. Louis, where the Canucks play today against the Blues.

Two Oil Kings On All-Stars

EDMONTON (CP) — The selection of Ray Neufeld and Craig Levie of Edmonton Oil Kings to the Western Hockey League all-star team to play in a five-team tournament was announced Monday.

Del Wilson and Brian Shaw, general manager and coach, respectively, of the WHL all-stars, said Neufeld and Levie were the first players selected to the team.

Also taking part in the tournament, to be played in Ontario during the Christmas holidays, will be a national junior team from the Soviet Union, the Canadian Olympic team, Ontario Hockey Association all-stars, and Quebec all-stars.

In Monday night's only league game, Brandon Wheat Kings stretched their undefeated record to 25 games with a 3-1 victory over Edthe Oil Kings.

Steelers In Romp Over Dismal '49ers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw returned to early-season form with three touchdown passes Monday night, two to Lynn Swann in a second-quarter hot streak, leading the Steelers to a 24-7 victory over San Francisco '49ers.

The Steelers improved their record to 11-2, best in the National Football League, while snapping out of a two-week offensive slump and sending the '49ers, 1-12, to an eighth consecutive defeat.

The victory raised Pittsburgh's lead to two games over Houston in the American Football Conference Central Division.

Roy Gerela kicked a 42-yard field goal for Pittsburgh in the first quarter. Ray Wersching of San Francisco missed a 30-yard field goal attempt after safety Chuck Crist intercepted a Bradshaw pass and made a 25-yard return to the Pittsburgh 41.

It was the eighth interception of the Steelers' quarterback in the last three games, but Bradshaw completed nine of his next 11 passes for 137 yards on second-quarter touchdown drives. Swann, the wide receiver who had no receptions in last week's 7-6 victory over Cincinnati, caught five passes for 88 yards on the two drives and snared touchdown passes covering 22 and 25 yards.

Bradshaw took the NFL lead in touchdown passes this year with 22 when he hit John Stallworth with an 11-yarder in the fourth quarter. Swann leads NFL receivers with 11 scoring receptions.

Pittsburgh's defence, which has allowed two touchdowns the last three games, yielded to the '49ers only after running back Rocky Bleier fumbled on a bad handoff in the third quarter. San Francisco's Paul Hofer ran two yards to score on a fourth-down play.

A moment of silence was observed before the game for San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and a city supervisor, Harvey Milk, who were shot at city hall Monday morning.

Burch, Hoshal Spark Straths

Barry Burch scored the tying points and Gord Hoshal put the club ahead to stay Monday as Strathcona Hotel tripped Trilec Installations 77-71 in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League game at Victoria High School.

In another game, Victoria Athletics topped Techline Copy Centre, 76-68.

Burch, who fired 11 points over-all, scored a late basket to give Strathcona a 71-70 lead and Hoshal connected for another two-pointer to give the club a lead it never relinquished.

Hoshal, Ian Scott and Grant Boland scored 12 points each for Strathcona, which trailed 42-37 at half time.

Tom Holmes emerged as the top gun for Athletics with 36 points and Jim MacKay supplied 22. John Lauvaas (20 points) and Greg Pass (14) set the pace for Techline, which trailed 37-32 at the midway point.

Outland Award

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma offensive guard Greg Roberts has won the Outland Award, presented by the Football Writers' Association of America to the player chosen as the outstanding interior lineman in U.S. collegiate football.

Oklahoma Ace Takes Trophy

NEW YORK (AP) — Oklahoma junior halfback Billy Sims, United States college's leading rusher who smashed the Oklahoma and Big Eight Conference single-season ground-gaining records, won the Heisman Trophy today as the nation's outstanding college football player.

In voting so close that a recount was ordered this morning, Sims won out over Penn State quarterback Chuck Fusina, Michigan quarterback Rick Leach and Southern California running back Charles White.

Sims, a 205-pound speedster from Hooks, Tex., received 151 first-place votes, 152 second-place votes and 70 third-place ballots for a total of 827 points on a 3-2-1 vote basis.

Fusina received 163 first-place votes, 12 more than Sims, but only 89 second-place votes and 83 first-place ballots for 750 points.

Then came a large drop to Leach, whose totals were 89-58-52 for 435 points. White's total was 37-74-98 for 354 points.

Adulation For Eskimos

EDMONTON (CP) — Jubilant football fans heaped adulation on Edmonton Eskimos Monday when the 1978 Canadian Football League champions returned home.

After being greeted by about 250 fans at Edmonton International Airport, the Eskimos were cheered loudly by more than 2,000 persons at a "Welcome Home" rally at the Edmonton Coliseum.

Racing's Ringers Tracked Down

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Clifford W. Wickman, president of the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau, said Monday that TRPB agents have uncovered a widespread horse substitution scheme in an investigation covering at least five states.

Wickman said investigators have uncovered substitutions made through the use of counterfeit foal certificates at five different tracks.

The investigation began at Waterford Park where a horse called Born A Great Count, finished second in a Trifecta race on Nov. 11. TRPB tatoo records showed the horse to be Baybatim, a superior horse who had been claimed in October at Thistledown and then shipped to Waterford to race as Born A Great Count.

The horse in question has been impounded at Waterford and the Federal Bureau of Investigation has been called into the case, Wickman said.

Later, Wickman said, investigators discovered that a central figure in the Baybatim-Born A Great Count case had purchased Charollius, a horse of mediocre racing quality, and that Charollius had won a race at Hawthorne on Nov. 18, the day before a major fire destroyed that track's grandstand, ending racing for the year at the Chicago track.

Investigators subsequentgly discovered that Charollius was actually a superior horse called Roman Decade.

Two other substitution cases were uncovered by TRPB at Thistledown, but in each one, the horses involved were unplaced. Also under investigation are two other suspected substitutions dating back to September which are being examined at Great Barrington Fair in Massachusetts and at Ellis Park in Kentucky.

In all cases, says Wickman, the method used in the substitutions involved counterfeit foal certificates, the same technique used in simliar schemes which were uncovered in 1972.

Wickman said all of the TRPB findings would be turned over to appropriate racing and law enforcement authorities and that, at this point, "there definitely appears to be a common thread of involvement by several licensees in racing."

Victorian Rowing Coach-of-Year

Lief Gotfredsen and the Canadian Rowing Association have given Victoria's rapidly-developing rowing program an added boost.

Gotfredsen was named Canada's "coach-of-the-year" by the CRA during its annual meeting in Darmouth, N.S., at the weekend.

Gotfredsen is the Victoria City Rowing Club's first fulltime coach and one of the reasons the sport has risen from virtual obscurity in the district to international prominence.

Rowers such as Katie Burke, Ina Delure, Kelly Jacklin, Lisa Roy, Janice Mason, John Alexander, Bruce Ford and Pat Walters have contributed to the sport's local development by winning national and international ranking.

Ford and Walters are ranked as one of the top doubles combination in North America. While not selected to represent Canada at the recent world championships in New Zealand, the Victoria pair easily defeated the American champions who finished fifth.

The Canadian body, perhaps atoning for an oversight, has tentatively designated Ford and Walters as Canada's pairs entry in the Pan-American Games next year.

Under Gotfredsen, and working in close harmony with University of Victoria coach Al Morrow, Victoria City continues to embark on a strong construction program.

Gotfredsen already has sparked a development program at Claremont High School to challenge, and thereby enhance, a level traditionally dominated by Shawnigan Lake Boys School and Brentwood College.

The Victoria City facilities at Elk Lake already have been touted as a possible training site for Canada's crews heading for the 1979 world championships as well as for the 1980 Olympics.

In Darmouth, CRA president Wes Kuran said Canada now can be considered one of the top countries in the world in women's rowing. He credited improved training and development standards for impressive Canadian showings in recent years.

In an effort to ensure similar performances from other Canadian entries in international events, the association agreed during its two-day weekend meeting to attempt to merge development and training programs of many of its affiliated clubs across Canada.

In practical terms, what that means is creation of all-star rowing teams made up of the best oarsmen in Canada, Kuran said. Such teams will then be entered in international competition.

Alexander, president of the City Club, said Monday he was aware of the CRA's development course and that he anticipates that the Elk Lake facility may become one of the one of the national training sites.

Barlow Loses Rubber Set In Cup Play

From AP-Reuter

MELBOURNE, Australia (CP) — Brenda Perry won the rubber match Tuesday of her Federation Cup opening-round singles play with Wendy Barlow of Victoria and launched New Zealand to a 3-0 tennis victory over Canada.

The Perry-Barlow match had been delayed Monday with the two players tied at one game apiece in their best-of-three set. Perry, who took the marathon second set 11-9 after losing the first 4-6, won the deciding third game today 6-2.

Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa won her opening game with New Zealander Judy Chaloner before losing 6-7, 6-4, 7-5. Chaloner then teamed with Christine Newman to defeat Barlow and Lise Senn of Toronto, 6-4, 6-3, in doubles play.

Team captain Josef Brabenec of Vancouver was pleased with his singles players, calling the efforts of Barlow and Blackwood "gutsy against opponents who are much more familiar with the game on grass."

Virginia Ruzici and Mariana Simionescu led Romania to a struggling 2-1 victory over Italy in their first-round tie. Also advancing into the second round was Britain, although the English team suffered what may have been a fatal blow.

Britain wrapped up its victory over Spain when Michele Tyler and Anne Hobbs beat Monica Alvarez-Mon and Carmen Perea in their unfinished doubles match, 8-6, 2-6, 6-2.

But Sue Barker, who took a heavy fall in her match against Alvarez-Monon Monday, is more seriously injured than first thought. Barker damaged back ligaments as well as her left groin muscle in her centre court tumble.

In other matches today, Czechoslovakia defeated Portugal, the Soviet Union downed Austria, Switzerland eliminated Ireland, and Yugoslovia downed Norway.

"Both your eardrums are showing definite signs of rejection. How long have you worked in a disco?"

Coliseum Dispute to NBA

CLEVELAND (AP) — The National Basketball Association has agreed to intervene as mediator in the dispute that has threatened to sever relations between Cleveland Cavaliers and the Richfield Coliseum, where the team now plays its home games.

Judge David T. Matia of Cuyahoga County common pleas court said Monday the two parties met in his chambers over the weekend and agreed to take their problems to the NBA office in New York.

He said lawyers for the Cavaliers and the Coliseum mutually agreed that the team will use the $32 million suburban building until Dec. 13.

Gulls Down Trios

Juan de Fuca Gulls moved out in the second period Monday and posted a 7-3 victory over Oak Bay Trios in South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League play at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Mike Adamek scored two goals to lead Gulls, who outscored Trios 4-1 in the middle frame after the teams had battled through a scoreless first period. Single tallies were added by Ron Hope, Bob Grant, Ron Schmidt, Mike Milligan and Dan Houston. Rick Schievink (2) and John Brown replied for Trios.

Peter Adamek blocked 36 shots on the Juan de Fuca goal while Marty Blitch of Oak Bay made 28 saves.

The win moved Gulls into sole possession of third place, one point behind runner-up Fuller Lake Flyers.

NO, I LEASED.
COME ON, LEASING'S JUST FOR BUSINESSES.

No way. I checked this idea Lease by Chrysler and they made a lot of sense for us.

But your wife doesn't drive enough.
It depends upon the kind of lease you choose. The Chrysler Leasing System people showed me the differences and worked out a lease that I can afford to pay each month.

And how long did you have to lease for?
Three years. But I could have had any length of lease I wanted.

I don't get it.
You will if you talk to the Chrysler Leasing System people. They make it so simple.

Doc's Show Best In English Soccer

LONDON (Reuter) — One of the most remarkable figures in English soccer has returned in triumph to his job as manager of Derby County.

Tommy Docherty was cheered by the fans as returned to the field while on his way to the dressing room after the team had won its First Division game with Queen's Park Rangers, 2-1.

Most people expected Derby to sack "The Doc" 10 days ago after he admitted giving fake testimony in a court case. Instead, after a week's thought, the club directors gave him a new contract Thursday and a pay rise.

"It's great to be back in the best job in the world," said Docherty, who—by way of celebration—went out and bought Steve Sims, a $500,000 centre-half from Leicester City.

In just over a year as Derby manager, Docherty has signed 15 players and sold 10. The deals have been worth a total of $5.3 million.

The ups and downs of Docherty's career are currently English soccer's best sideshow, but the team remains stuck in mid-table. Liverpool and Nottingham Forest are more boring—they just keep winning.

Liverpool stayed two points clear of the field in the First Division by beating Middlesbrough 2-0 with goals from Terry McDermott and Graeme Souness, both of whom emerged from the match with groin injuries.

Phil Neal, Liverpool's penalty specialist, made an uncharacteristic mistake from the spot just after half-time. It was the start of a bad week for Neal, who later lost his place as England's right back to Viv Anderson of Nottingham Forest for the friendly match with Czechoslovakia on Wednesday.

Ron Greenwood, England manager, Monday confirmed Anderson, 22, as the first black soccer star to play for England.

Anderson's club beat Bolton 1-0 Saturday for its 42nd consecutive league victory over two seasons.

Everton, which, like Forest, is still unbeaten this season, held on to second place with a 1-0 win at Norwich.

ROSE CONSIDERS TURNER'S OFFER

ATLANTA (AP) — Pete Rose met Monday with Ted Turner, owner of Atlanta Braves, and promised to consider making this city his future professional home, said a spokesman for the Braves.

"They had a very amicable luncheon," said Randy Donaldson. "Pete promised to take Ted's offer under consideration."

Rose, a 37-year-old third baseman and currently baseball's most sought-after free agent, was to meet this week with other teams seeking to sign him to a contract. They include Kansas City, St. Louis, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

"He promised he would get back to Ted by Friday," said Donaldson.

Reuven Katz, who represents Rose, said the third baseman was definitely leaving Cincinnati Reds after 16 years because of contract differences.

"We're just too far apart," Katz said. There is "no chance" of a last-minute compromise.

It's been reported that Philadelphia Phillies have offered Rose a $2 million, three-year package.

Such financial heights may not be within reach of the cellar-dwelling Braves, one of the poorest draws in baseball, but Turner could tap his other enterprises for the cash, Donaldson said.

Land of Rising Yen Is Hard to Swallow

CINCINNATI (AP) — Back from the Land of the Rising Yen, the travelling Cincinnati Reds found Japanese prices—and some of the favored foods—hard to swallow.

"We got the shock of our lives," said Ramona Lum, who accompanied her husband Mike, a utility player, on the four-week tour. "Everything is less expensive in America. Everything."

A Japanese newspaper sponsored the trip, allotting each member of the 60-person delegation 15,000 yen a day—approximately $80. It didn't go far.

"Food was astronomical," said Mrs. Lum.

Pete Rose, the Reds' longtime team captain, paid $47.50 for a steak. "Just a steak, nothing with it," said his wife Karolyn. "Everything was a la carte. The meal came to $150—for one person."

A martini cost $5.50 and a roast beef sandwich went for $30. A side trip to a supermarket revealed that a two-pound can of coffee went for $17.

The Lums discovered that the Japanese automobile they own cost $2,000 more in Japan.

In addition to running into galloping inflation, the group experienced everything from wall-to-wall humanity to exotic foods that sent most stomachs flip-flopping.

Not Lum's though—his ancestry is Japanese-Hawaiian.

"He was in hog heaven," said his wife.

Slugger Johnny Bench dined on jellyfish, octopus and fish eggs. Outfielder Champ Summers sampled raw fish, but rookie pitcher Mike LaCoss stuck to American basics. "They had hundreds of McDonalds joints over there. And pizza and ice cream parlors too."

Rose's wife tried blowfish, finding it "rubbery." She munched whole shrimps which were fried live on a grill. "They were good, but crunchy."

At the ballpark, she found that Japanese prefered a bowl of cold rice over the ubiqitous American hotdog. She gave the rice a try, "but I couldn't get it down."

The stadiums sold saki, beer and hotdogs. "But we were warned not to eat the hotdogs."

Everton's Kenyon Joins Whitecaps

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps have announced the signing of English national player Roger Kenyon of Everton to a three-year contract with the North American Soccer League team.

A Vancouver spokesman said Monday that Kenyon, a defender with eight years experience in the English first division, was bought for "at least six figures" and also was sought by other NASL and English teams.

Kenyon, 28, is to arrive here in February and will continue to play for Everton in the meantime. The six-footer weighs 180 pounds and has played in seven international games for England.

The spokesman said the Whitecaps were still negotiating with Peter Daniel of Derby County about the 1979 season. Daniel and John Craven were the centre defenders for Vancouver last season. Craven already is owned outright by the Whitecaps.

Footballer 'Took Drugs'

LONDON (AP) — Stan Bowles, star of Queen's Park Rangers soccer team, was at the centre of a controversy Monday after stating he took drugs.

"I would suspend him," said Alan Hardaker, secretary of the English League. "But such power does not lie with me.

"Bowles is guilty of making our footballers appear like hippies. He gives the impression they are all sticking hypodermic syringes in their arms to make them jump 16 feet in the air. He paints a completely inaccurate picture of the average professional footballer."

Bowles said he had taken amphetamines and valium.

If there was a surprise dope check on all the players taking part in Saturday matches there would definitely be some who would not get through the tests," Bowles added.

The English Football Association is currently conducting an inquiry into which drugs are acceptable and which are not.

Jean Stokes of Royal Colwood is the new chairperson of the Lower Vancouver Island (zone 1) Women's Golf Association.

The Great UFO Caper

. . . In Grenada They Live Again

UNITED NATIONS — Former U.S. astronaut Gordon Cooper says he believes flying saucers are visiting the earth from other planets and many of them were seen in 1951 flying in formation over Europe, a UN committee was told Monday.

Wellington Friday, education minister of Grenada, read a letter which he said is from Cooper when the General Assembly's Special Political Committee discussed the question of unidentified flying objects.

Friday quoted from a letter which he said Cooper sent to his delegation saying: "I believe that these extra-terrestrial vehicles and their crews are visiting this planet from other planets, which are obviously a little more advanced than we are here on earth.

Cooper stated that most astronauts are very reluctant even to discuss UFOs "due to the great numbers of people who have indiscriminately sold fake stories and forged documents abusing their names and reputations without hesitation."

But, he added, there are "several of us who do believe in UFOs" and who have had occasion to see a UFO on the ground, or from an airplane.

"There was only one occasion from space which may have been a UFO," the letter said, without elaborating.

The committee deferred action until a later meeting on a draft resolution, submitted by Grenada, recommending that the UN "initiate, conduct and co-ordinate research on the nature and origin of unidentified flying objects and related phenomena."

Grenada first brought the subject before the UN three years ago.

Grenada's Prime Minister Sir Eric Gairy appealed to the committee Monday to take the matter seriously, saying:

"It is presumptuous for men to believe that they are God's only intelligent beings and that no such other intelligent life exists on other planets. Such a belief is a gross fallacy."

The prime minister of the 133-square-mile state sees Earth as the Grenada of the universe, and is sure we have cosmic neighbors we've never met.

The flamboyant prime minister said he believes UFOs are spaceships, populated by beings who want to "instill mankind and Earth with a better way of life."

"I have an interest in the mystical side of life," Gairy told reporters. "That has motivated me to think that the planet Earth could not be all of God's domain."

"I'm connected with nearly everthing that is esoteric," he said.

The prime minister told reporters he has had two personal UFO experiences, both in Grenada. The first sighting came about three years ago, at 2:30 a.m. as he was returning home from a nightclub, he said, and he has been a believer ever since.

. . . And Report from Mexico

GUADALAJARA, Mexico — Two objects described as luminous flying saucers were reported by residents and a police officer near Guadalajara, authorities said Monday.

Authorities said one of the unidentified flying objects hovered about 30 feet over the patrol car of policeman Francisco Diaz Cortes and emitted a red light that turned on the car's siren and made it spin around.

The policeman said the UFO then descended rapidly behind some nearby hills and when he gave chase he found another flying object.

The police said they fired on the UFOs, both of which took off after rapidly emitting red light. Neither apparently was hit by the shots.

'I Felt A Mean, Terrible Thing Rip Me'

HONOLULU — "I fell down and felt a mean, terrible thing rip my skin apart," said Wendell Cabunoc, a surfer attacked by a shark near here.

"When I came up my white board was all red with blood."

Cabunoc, 18, a high-school senior, recalled his trauma Monday from a bed in the intensive care unit at Queen's Medical Centre where doctors grafted arteries from his legs in hopes of saving his injured left arm.

"I'm just thankful that I'm alive," he said.

Cabunoc was surfing Sunday in murky water about 25 yards from shore off Hau Bush Beach Park.

"This wave came in and I wiped out," he said. "I fell underwater and something hit me and tore my arm off."

He didn't see the shark, "I just felt it."

After surfacing, Cabunoc said he managed to climb on his surfboard and paddle to shore with his good arm.

"I thought he might come back," he said.

Other surfers used towels to stop the bleeding until an ambulance arrived.

4 Years After Rape Memory Still Hurts

LOS ANGELES — For singer Connie Francis, the applause may never be quite the same.

It's been four years since she was raped by an intruder who broke into her Long Island motel room.

She hasn't performed publicly since, despite an onrush of resulting publicity.

This week the 38-year-old entertainer is to appear on her friend Dick Clark's Wednesday Live television show.

The songstress who popularized such hits as Where The Boys Are, Lipstick On Your Collar and Who's Sorry Now? has had comeback offers before said she "didn't want to do anything."

"I just stayed in bed and watched television for six months before I would even go see a psychiatrist," she said Monday.

"There will be people who will come to see my show (because of the rape), but I don't like to dwell on personal problems.

Only the Rainbow Wasn't for Sale

BEVERLY HILLS — The rainbow she yearned to fly over, like the bluebirds, wasn't for sale. Just about all the other leftovers from Judy Garland's life were.

Hundreds of fans, who paid $25 just to get in the door and another $25 for a catalogue of the offerings, turned out Monday to bid on more than 400 items of memorabilia owned by the singer's former husband, Sid Luft, who stored them following their divorce in 1965.

They paid more than $100,000 for the privilege of owning something she had worn, collected, sung from or into, played or eaten with, or sat or slept or ridden in.

The highest bidder was Rick Meyer, who paid $60,000 for her 1953 Mercedes Benz auto.

Meyer was not further identified and many of the bidders would not reveal their names.

Who will get the money was unclear.

A federal court judge turned down a petition by a group called the The Judy Garland Foundation for a restraining order to halt the auction, but agreed to to hear arguments Friday over whether Luft should get the auction proceeds.

Actress Lily Tomlin paid $1,200 for a pair of dice — loaded so they always come up 11 — given to Miss Garland by Humphrey Bogart during filming of A Star Is Born.

Actor Bud Cort bought an antique Japanese style gold screen from for $500.

The scrapbook she began as a teen-ager, holding her press clippings and other memorabilia from The Wizard of Oz, was bought for $6,500 by a large, blond man who appeared to be in his early 30s. He would not give his name.

Her "lucky shirt" — black silk encrusted with bugle beads, which she wore in many concerts in her later years — went for $3,000.

A leather-bound book of poetry titled Thoughts and Poems of Judy Garland went for $3,000, a letter from Joan Crawford for $700.

Her personal, much annotated, score of Over the Rainbow fetched $1,800 from an unidentified young man from Minneapolis, her personal songbook went for $1,500.

A Five-Way Legal Split

BELLEVILLE, Ont. — Two local lawyers and their three secretaries will split the $1 million they won for holding a winning ticket Sunday's Provincial lottery draw. John Bailey, 33, Dave Blair, 31, Karen Goodchild, 27, Debbie Davis, 23, and Eleanor Graham, 42, will each receive $200,000.

Charles Goes to Spain With His Lady Jane

LONDON — Prince Charles, bachelor heir to the British throne, plans a hunting holiday in Spain next weekend with an old flame, Lady Jane Wellesley.

Lady Jane, 27, the Duke of Wellington's daughter, will join the prince and his party at the duke's 2,000-acre estate near Granada, Buckingham Palace announced Monday.

Twisted Roots

NEW YORK — Writer Alex Haley concedes that his best-seller about his family's ancestry is rooted partly in passages from another book.

The author of Roots took the witness stand Monday in U.S. District Court and said three passages from Harold Courlander's The African found their way into his book.

Haley said he had not read The African before Roots was published and said the passages were probably among a host of material donated to him during years of research.

School Tax Cut Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Teachers' Federation has again called on the provincial government to assume a larger share of the costs of public schools in B.C. and reduce the burden on property taxpayers.

The proposal, which was first put forward at the federation's convention in August, calls on the government to reduce the basic school tax levy, increase homeowners' grants and increase direct grants to school districts to compensate for inflation.

Federation president Pat Brady said he has asked for a meeting with the provincial cabinet to discuss the proposal.

February Release In Crash?

EDMONTON (CP) — Transport Canada's report into the crash of a Pacific Western Airlines (PWA) jet at Cranbrook Feb. 11 may not be released before next February, a department accident investigator said Monday.

Robert Cook said the report into the causes of the crash of a Boeing 737 which took 43 lives is completed and has been before a department review board in Ottawa.

It is now in the hands of various interested parties whose written comments will be reviewed by the Ottawa board, he said. It will then be translated into French and, if there is no lengthy backlog of reports to be translated, could be ready for public release in February.

North Coast On Hydro Grid

VANCOUVER (CP) — The north coast communities of Prince Rupert, Kitimat and Terrace have been integrated into British Columbia Hydro's provincial power grid, says the Crown corporation.

Hydro said in a news release that the interconnection, through a recently-completed 500,000-volt transmission line, will allow for future load growth in the region.

Until the new link was completed Nov. 22, the communities were supplied by surplus power from the Aluminium Co. of Canada's generating complext near Kitimat via a 287,000-volt transmission lines.

The continued rapid growth in the North Coast portion of the province, however, has reached the limit of power that can be supplied to Hydro from Alcan, said Hydro.

About $100 million has been spent on the transmission line and associated substations, control and communication facilities, Hydro said.

Illness Your Own Fault: City Doctor

KAMLOOPS (CP) — If you are ill with cancer, heart disease or arthritis, it could be your own fault, says a doctor with the Victoria Holistic Health Centre.

Dr. Ron Puhky said most degenerative diseases killing and maiming Canadians could be prevented through improved lifestyles.

"You can't go to a doctor and say 'make me well.' You've got to do it yourself," said Puhky.

He cited statistics showing 80 per cent of Canadians are physically inactive and 50 per cent are obese. Combined with the high incidence of smoking and stress, unnecessary deaths from degenerative disease are on the rise, said the doctor.

"Eighty-five per cent of all deaths from heart disease are preventable if people would lose weight, lower their cholesterol levels, stop smoking, lower blood pressure and get more exercise."

Puhky criticized the western medical system, which he said emphasizes treatment after the body has been damaged. While in medical school at McGill University, he said he was never given a single lecture on nutrition.

Puhky, here to conduct a weekend workshop in preventive medicine, said he knows of only 40 physicians in British Columbia who strongly stress prevention in health care.

"I can't compete with companies who spend millions of dollars telling people to smoke cigarettes and eat their crappy food."

Cabinet Study Of Bendrodt Case Delayed

The provincial cabinet will wait until next Monday before studying the transcript of the Judicial Council of B.C.'s inquiry into provincial court Judge Erik Bendrodt.

The cabinet was scheduled to deal with the council's recommendations at its regular weekly meeting Thursday, but the meeting has been cancelled because Premier Bill Bennett and five of his ministers are in Ottawa for a first ministers' conference. Several other ministers are out of town.

During the inquiry earlier this month, Bendrodt admitted to being an alcoholic and to having picked up a teen-aged prostitute.

The council said the judge's actions were regrettable, but questioned whether he should be removed from the bench for a single moral lapse, and recommended no further action be taken.

Several cabinet ministers have already said they are dissatisfied with the council's recommendation.

Woman Charged In Farris Probe

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver woman, believed to be linked to the resignation of the former chief justice of British Columbia through a notebook found in a high-class bawdy house, appeared in provincial court Monday.

Wendy King, 30, was remanded until Dec. 11 on a charge of keeping a common bawdy house. Charged with the same offense is Raymond Yuen, also known as Raymond Young, who lived in the same West End apartment as King.

John Farris resigned as chief justice earlier this month following reports that police found his name in a notebook when they raided a suspected bawdy house in the West End.

The federal justice department is conducting an investigation into Farris' activities while chief justice.

King returned to Canada from the United States and surrendered to police Sunday, four days after she was charged.

She said in a television interview that police seized several bags of material from her apartment, but she had no notebook in the suite.

Her lawyer, Robert Gardner, would not let her comment about reported links to Farris and a police spokesman declined comment Monday.

Judge Peter Millward will sentence Ridge Dec. 20. The charges were laid after three pounds of MDA were seized in 1977.

School Drinking Classes Urged

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Young people should be taught responsible drinking in high schools as a way of attacking the problem of alcoholism, a Canadian expert on addictive behavior says.

Dr. Alan Marlatt, currently a professor of psychology at the University of Washington, says drinking classes would teach children proper behavior skills in handling alcohol and reduce the likelihood of problems developing later in their lives.

Marlatt said in an interview that controlled use and moderation — not abstinence — should be the initial aim in counselling youths on alcohol.

He added the same approach could be used in dealing with drugs and smoking.

"I think the idea of moderate use of drugs is an emerging attitude . . . a compromise between those who say it should not be done at all and those who say it's okay to do it all the time," he said.

Marlatt said the key to handling addiction problems is to get addicts to recognize they have control over their habit.

He said programs such as Alcoholics Anonymous ignore this and consequently fail to get the desired results.

A principle tenet of AA is that alcoholics are powerless to control their habit.

Marlatt also said forced abstention seldom if ever works because it does not allow for the possibility of relapse. For that reason he questions the compulsory heroin treatment program which is due to start in the province the first of the year.

"It will all depend on the addicts' perception of the program," he said adding he expects little in the way of acceptance as long as the 'forbidden fruit' concept prevails.

Marlatt said he feels the answer to heroin addiction has to lie in decriminalizing the drug and making it available to individuals who are dependent on it.

The present treatment programs don't focus enough on the root of the problem — the addict's lifestyle.

It is impossible to set up a drug intervention program without altering the lifestyle in some way, he said.

Marlatt believes addicts have far greater control over their habit than most people give them credit for. He noted less than one per cent of the American servicemen who got hooked on heroin in Viet Nam ended up incorrigible addicts when they returned home. Most were able to quit.

Marlatt said his views represent only the minority. Most of the people in his profession react vehemently to any suggestion drugs should be legitimized or tolerated, he said.

However, he said, the traditional methods of treating addictions can hardly be considered successful.

According to research studies in the United States only two persons in 10 who quit a habit — smoking, alcohol or heroin — manage to stay off longer than a year and only one person in 10 stays off longer than two years.

The emphasis, he says, has to be more on coping with the addiction problem and concentrating on the reasons why an addict returns to his habit.

Dockyard Busy

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Canadian National's dockyard here has had a steady flow of business from Russia this year.

BIG PUBS VANISHING

The day of barn-sized beer parlors is over in B.C., says the general manager of the Liquor Control and Licensing Branch.

Vic Woodlands said Monday no licences are being issued for big beer parlors, and there has been a steady change-over from the 225-seat Public House licence to the 125-seat Class A Neighborhood Pub licence.

He said hotels are willing to give up some seats because the smaller pubs are easier to control and the Class A licence allows them to provide full liquor service as well as draught beer.

"I don't think we've had one bit of trouble with an A pub in the hotels since they've converted," said Woodlands.

Woodlands said the branch is cracking down on the sale of liquor in Vancouver's skid road, but it is a no-win situation.

He said licences of three hotels have been suspended, hearings will be held shortly on three or four more, and hours of three nightclubs have been cut.

The general manager said liquor inspectors are concentrating on the Hasting Street area, but there is not much that can be done to clean up the fringes around Gastown.

"It's been skid road for years. That's where the cheap hotels and roomings houses are and that's where the bums are going to hang out," he said.

He said the problem has been compounded by an influx of native Indians.

"Many of the native population has moved down from South Granville into Gastown recently, and this just boomed up the problem.

"South Granville is in pretty good shape — there's not many around there now. In fact we haven't had any problem there for some time but, of course, it's increased the number of incidents down skid road."

Cut-Your-Own Trees for 25¢

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitobans who don't mind a little work and a little travel can get a bargain on Christmas trees again this year. The provincial government has opened a tract of land near Richer, Man., about 55 kilometres southeast of Winnipeg, for those who want to pay 25 cents and cut their own trees.

SAANICH CREW REMOVES LOGS

More work on a drainage project was carried out Monday on Saanich-owned property at Panama Flats, but this time it was done by a municipal crew and not by the farming family of Saanich Ald. Geoff Vantreight.

Mayor Mel Couvelier told reporters Monday the crew was removing stop-logs from the concrete drainage basin built without municipal authorization by the Vantreights, and not dismantling the structure itself as a radio station had erroneously reported.

He said the logs were removed from the basin's outlet weir to allow water from Colquitz Creek to flow back on the Panama Flats flood plain.

The crew also removed some of the excavated material piled adjacent to the creek, which had been acting as a berm and obstructing the natural flow of water.

Municipal engineer Clifford Warren said today the Vantreights have been given permission to flag the ditches they excavated, in case the ditches freeze over after flooding and pose a danger to skaters.

Crows: A Job For Region?

Saanich aldermen agreed Monday that if warfare is going to be waged against crows, the attack must be launched on an organized intermunicipal front rather than through isolated guerrilla sniping.

Council's bylaw enforcement committee recommended that the whole problem of crow population control be turned over to the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee for strategy development.

Chief Bob Peterson said in a report the proposal for an organized crow shoot would achieve only a negligible impact in reducing the crows and suggested instead an egg destruction campaign in the nesting areas.

But Mayor Mel Couvelier said in that case "Oak Bay would also have to mobilize their gendarmes," as the neighboring municipality is equally infested and harbors some of the prime nesting areas and staging points.

James Hatter, former director of the B.C. fish and wildlife branch, suggested if some form of extermination is carried out, the carcasses be turned over to the Provincial Museum biologists for study.

He said there is concern about crow predation on Vancouver Island's songbird population, but no one knows the extent of the problem and therefore such analysis could prove useful.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N1.

DEAR DR. POWELL: I am a 17-year-old girl. I am also 8½ months pregnant. The father of my child is the same age as myself. He is very much into drugs (chemicals). That is the main reason why we split up. Also because he felt he wasn't responsible enough to be a father.

I tried to shut him out of my mind but lately I notice how much I still love him. My problem is I'm not sure if my child should recognize him as its father and what I should do about how I feel about him. I would gratefully appreciate your advice.

ANSWER: You are facing a difficult decision. He has some rights as the father, although if you are not married he has no legal claim. I think you need some help and counselling. Perhaps you should seek it alone as your boyfriend does not share your feelings.

There are agencies where social workers can give you the help you need right now. The Children's Aid Society is very concerned about you and your infant and will be very helpful in providing a worker to help you sort out all the mixed-up feelings you have right now.

Your boyfriend is also only 17 and he may be feeling scared and left out and just as uncertain as you are. After you have seen the social worker you may want to ask him to go with you. He is very much involved. He may want to help you support the baby financially.

Whether he felt he was not responsible enough to be a father is not particularly relevant now. He has become a father and he must learn he has to assume some of the responsibility.

DEAR DR. COTTER: I am really tired of life. I'm nearly 15 and have no social life. I try to talk to boys, like friends of my brother who is 17. None of them seem interested. I try to look my best at all times. I've been told that I'm quite pretty.

I argue with my parents because I must find a Jewish boy. I don't know any Jewish boys and for various reasons I don't want to join a Jewish organization. Please give me some advice. I need help.

ANSWER: Part of your trouble is just being 15 and part of it is your parents' desire to keep you inside your religious and cultural group. At 15 as at any age, you should have some social life with your own sex: Have you girlfriends to relieve the boredom? Do they have to be Jewish too?

It is very hard to buck a strong religious and cultural background at your age. You must either go further into it, or prepare for the day when you join a wider humanity. To go further into it you must become genuinely religious and you will find many spiritual treasures in your religious heritage.

To get out of it, you have to go on with your education and wait to grow up to the stage where you can support yourself and live on your own and make your own friends.

Either way will be tiresome and boring unless you find a way of enjoying your own company and not relying too much on people around you. Good luck.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I am a 14-year-old girl. My problem is that I have a crush on two guys, Jay and John. Both are nice and have a nice personality. John is 15 and Jay is 16. John was in my class and Jay is a guy I've known for 2 years. They both like me as a girlfriend. They're the only guys I like as boyfriends.

I don't know which one to pick from because they've both aksed to go around with them. Should I go with one boy? I'm so puzzled. What can you suggest to help me solve this terrible problem of mine?

ANSWER: They both sound like good friends of yours and I would advise you to keep it that way. To go with someone steady should mean that out of all the people that you know the one you are going steady with is the most special and most important person to you.

Since you feel the same about both the boys that are asking you out, then you hven't found the one person most important to you. Until that time comes along I would suggest that you don't decide to go steady with anyone, but accept dates from both boys and keep them as good friends.

Energy Tips For Kitchen

OTTAWA (CP) — The greatest energy user in the kitchen is the electric range, says Maria Nazarowec, food consultant for the Agriculture Canada's food advisory division.

Ms. Nazarowec, who has completed a study to compare amounts of electricity required for the electric range and several small electric appliances, says that "if used properly, the range can be cost efficient."

Cooking inside the oven is generally better, she says, since it has a locked-in energy conserver.

As soon as it reaches the required heat it shuts off and cooks with stored heat. On the other hand, the surface elements stay on at the particular setting and therefore should be turned down to the lowest practical level.

"The energy saving depends upon your proper use of the oven," says Ms. Nazarowec. "Cook several items at a time for a total oven meal.

"Avoid opening the oven door during cooking — every time you open the door it costs you a 20-per-cent heat loss."

She also studied the increasingly popular microwave oven.

"Generally speaking, when the load is small, a microwave oven uses less energy than a range or other small appliances."

The slow cooker, she says, cooks such foods as pot roasts most efficiently.

Ms. Nazarowec offers some suggestions on how to save energy in the kitchen.

Use utensils that fit surface elements properly. Pots and pans with straight sides, flat bottoms and tight-fitting lids make best use of heat.

Make use of appliances as they are intended. For example, the toaster, not the oven broiler, for toasting bread; and the electric kettle, not the top stove element, for boiling water.

Prepare large amounts of foods when using the oven and freeze the surplus.

Turn off appliances when finished.

By HARRIET HART

There are different types of mental breakdowns. Some are caused by physical reasons, others by psychological or social factors.

The 6-page folder What Are Mental Illnesses? Stresses that mental illness is never a question of failure or lack of willpower. To suggest to a mentally ill person to snap out of it, is like suggesting to somebody with a broken arm to play tennis.

Mental illness is now our most urgent health problem. Nearly half of all hospital beds in Canada are presently occupied by the mentally ill and the cost of care and treatment of mental illnesses in Canada has been estimated at more than one million dollars a day.

Remember that mental illness is just an illness and that the mentally ill need help just as any other sick person. Acceptance by family and friends is an urgent need for the mentally disabled, once the doctors have done their work.

With your request for the folder please enclose a long (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope and send it to: Canadian Mental Health Association, 2160 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ont. M4S 2Z3.

Back to Doing Housework

The Johnstons with a treasured basket woven by women of Kenya

Ken and Margaret Johnston have been readjusting to the freedom and security of Canada, since they returned to this part of the world, last July.

They had been living in Kenya for three years, where Ken was with the Canadian Commission.

Life styles and ways of doing things were quite different in that country.

At their home in Nairobi, for instance, all windows were barred, the grounds heavily fenced and security guards on duty day and night.

There was an alarm system in their bedroom and living room. An iron door separated the sleeping quarters from the rest of the house.

Not because of any trouble in Kenya. It's a very stable country, Johnston says.

Rather because of the unrest in Tanzania and Uganda and the possibility of marauding groups from those countries invading the place to rob and perhaps kill.

"Those dangers were a part of life over there," Johnston explains, "and you accepted them."

Adjustments for Margaret have meant learning all over to do her own housework and cooking.

In Nairobi that work, down to the smallest detail, was taken over by a house staff of two.

"They called me Mama and sometimes Mem Sahib and they expected me to tell them how things were to be done.

"But I would have lost face if I had attempted to do anything myself." Mrs. Johnston says.

"It was a bit hard to get used to at first. Especially trying to find ways to fill my days.

"There were social events, of course. With some 84 embassies and commissions in Kenya, that was inevitable.

"But it was the empty hours that were difficult to fill. Finally I did that by taking up golf in earnest."

Ken was always addressed as B'wana, meaning Boss. It was he who approved any staff changes. That was expected.

Once hired however, it was "mama" for whom they worked.

The Johnstons left Victoria in 1970 when Ken, then a purchasing and personnel officer with the Defensive Research Establishment Pacific (DREP) decided to transfer to external affairs.

They spent five years over in London where he worked as a consular officer before going to Kenya.

Part of his work in that country was to keep in touch with as many Canadians as possible through a regular bulletin giving the latest news from Canada.

Not only in Kenya but also in Uganda "where the greater number were missionaries."

He also worked closely with the Canadian Industrial Development Association (CIDA).

"It is doing a tremendous work out there," he says.

One of its projects, completed a short time ago, is the Kenya Technical Training College.

"Right now it is totally manned by Canadians but as the native teachers are trained in the technical subject so very much needed, they will take over and our people will return home."

Still another CIDA project just under way is the development of a hyrdo dam on the Tana River to provide electricity for the country.

"That will take five years to complete."

Speaking of the women of Kenya the Johnstons say that while a few of the educated are beginning to take part in public affairs, and there are some female members in the Kenya parliament, the majority are still doing labor work.

"They are digging, planting, packing wood, water and babies on their backs and it could be another 50 years before they are westernized in any great numbers."

Here they spoke with affection of 52-year-old Joeli, head of their household staff in Nairobi, who openly wept when they left for Canada.

His wife lives three or four hundred miles away on a small piece of farm land called a shamba.

She does all the work on that land as well as caring for seven children.

Touching briefly on the peaceful transition of leadership in Kenya after the death of Jomo Kenyatta, Johnston tells you it is his belief Daniel Arap Moi, now the president, will hold the support he has been given across tribal and political lines.

Certainly Moi has been left problems as well as achievements by the Kenyatta regime, he points out, "But there is no doubt he has started well."

Turning quickly back to Victoria, Ken and Margaret describe how they waited months for their household furnishings to arrive from Nairobi.

Everything was shipped before they left but they only received it a week or so ago.

Lost in transit? No indeed!

Held over in Vancouver because of the dock strike.

Now with all their familiar things around them again the Johnstons are eagerly looking forward to Christmas, the first they will spend in Victoria since they left here in 1970.

With them will be their sons, Brent, who is in forestry work with the provincial government and Gary, a school teacher and an outstanding Victoria rugby player, with his wife Judy.

NON-ADDICTING PAINKILLER?

your health

By L.L. COLEMAN, M.D.

An exciting concept is on the horizon for the control of pain. The preliminary trials are particularly interesting because the drug does not produce addiction.

A particular kind of amino acid, d-phenylalanine (DPA), seems to be able to encourage the body's own pain-relieving mechanism. It acts in a complicated way.

The method by which it inhibits pain is under investigation at the Chicago Medical School. There, Dr. Seymour Ehrenpreis and Dr. Reuben C. Balagot have transferred their laboratory efforts to chronic-pain patients who have not responded well to other drugs at their disposal.

The most remarkable aspect of this drug is its potential for relieving pain simply by taking it only once a month.

Dr. Solomon H. Snyder, at the Johns Hopkins Medical Centre in Baltimore, believes that DPA for the control of pain is "a very good idea and an excellent approach that could conceivably produce other new non-addicting painkillers."

The study of pain has expanded enormously in the last two decades. Some of the advances are spectacular. It is hoped that before long no one, no matter how serious his condition, will have to endure the added burden of unrelieved pain.

I doubt that many people are aware of how many health-protecting agencies are on the constant lookout for the safety of people. It's a source of comfort to know that there are numerous watch-dog institutions and agencies that are constantly on the alert to protect all of us.

Public health officials in one area found that the salt used to de-ice roads may be seeping into the water supply of certain communities. This can increase the sodium content of the water and may be responsible for elevations in high blood pressure in children and adults.

Although the matter is not a massive threat to health, it is comforting to know that our medical destiny is being protected in the most unexpected ways.

CHOICE OF 65 IN POCKETBOOK?

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a famous 19th-century German leader, Otto von Bismarck, who decided retirement age should be 65, says Over Easy, a Public Broadcasting show for seniors.

He picked that age because he had been told few of his country's workers who were to receive retirement pensions lived to be 65, the show says.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column you said it was all right for a girl to let a guy know she liked him and wanted to see him again. You said it would save time, and do away with a lot of game-playing.

My son disagrees with you. He is a flight attendant with a big airline and he says he's turned off by women who are forward. He claims that men still like to do the courting, but lately they don't have a chance because womens' libbers have made women so aggressive.

I must say that I agree with my son, Abby. When I was a girl my mother never allowed me to call up a boy, and I always had more dates than I could handle.

I told my son how it was in the "olden days" when I was dating, and he said, "It's too bad it's not like that today. It would be much more romantic."

Just thought you'd like to hear about a young man who prefers an old-fashioned girl.

MOM

DEAR MOM: If it works for him, fine. But my mail indicates that most men prefer women who aren't ashamed to make the first move rather than those who use the old laid-back, catch-me-if-you-can technique. Read on:

DEAR ABBY:Thanks for the terrific column suggesting how a decent woman can meet a decent man.

You're absolutely right about evening classes. They are usually loaded with single guys who want to get ahead and at the same time are trying to fill up some of their free time.

But your final suggestion — that girls might make the first move if they really dig a guy — is probably the best advice you ever gave.

You'd be amazed at how many men are still smarting from a rejection they received six months ago. (Most men are reluctant to come on to a girl because they're afraid they'll be turned down.) I know from experience that the average man would be thrilled if a woman took the initiative and let him know she'd like to see him again.

Thanks, Abby, for telling girls that men appreciate honesty and that playing hard-to-get is passe.

Your letter was just what I needed to get me in the mood to start looking for a girl again. I had just about given up.

ERIK

DEAR ABBY:I have a question and I don't know where to find the answer. Could you ask your experts about it?

Is it true that many homosexuals become that way after being seduced by older adults when they were young and impressionable? (I'm not the only one who would like to know.)

J.L.

DEAR J. L.: My experts agree that homosexuals are born — not made.

Algerian Leader Dying

ALGIERS (AP) — A leading Swedish scientist has returned home after advising Algerian leaders that President Houari Boumedienne is dying of a rare disease and nothing can be done to save him, diplomatic sources reported today.

The diplomats said Prof. Jan Waldenstroem told the Algerians if the 53-year-old president survives the next few days, his system will gradually deteriorate.

Boumedienne, who has dominated Algeria since his military coup 13 years ago, is suffering from a disease discovered by Waldenstroem and named after him.

It is a malignancy of the lymph glands that results in disintegration of bone marrow, kidney failure and disintegration of the circulatory and digestive systems.

Waldenstroem, 72, came to Algiers at the request of the government and confirmed an earlier diagnosis that Boumedienne is suffering from the disease in its most malignant form.

More than 40 specialists from 12 nations have been trying to prolong the president's life.

The government-controlled media carried optimistic reports Monday, but one official said: "It is merely a question of time."

Informed sources said Boumedienne could be kept alive for weeks by survival machines, but he was not expected to regain his faculties or physical strength.

Although several members of the leadership council are considered potential successors, there is no heir apparent to Boumedienne.

The front runners include Foreign Minister Abdulaziz Bouteflika, 41, and Mohamed Salah Yahiaoui, 46, administrator of the National Liberation Front, the only legal party.

Boumedienne, a military commander who ousted President Ahmed Ben Bella in 1965, became a prominent Third World political figure during his presidency and his successor is expected to continue his policies.

He is considered one of the developing nations' most militant leftists and "anti-imperialists" although he maintains economic ties with France, the United States and other Western nations.

San Francisco: Crazytown-by-the-Pacific

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — In the chilly, beautiful city that has inspired song and poetry, grief hung like fog today amid a plague of bizarre violence that led residents to ask: "Why does it happen here?"

"I feel so sorry for this city," said a citizen shaken by the murder Monday of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk. "We've had the Zebra killers, the Zodiac, the SLA, the Peoples Temple and now this. I don't know how much more we can take."

The tearful throng of 25,000 to 40,000 residents who gathered in shock outside city hall Monday night tried to provide their own answer. Carrying candles and clinging to their neighbors like survivors of some natural catastrophe or a war, they sang We Shall Overcome.

"This is every misfit's favorite city as well as the favorite city of a lot of straight, normal people," said Reg Murphy, editor and publisher of The Examiner.

"It's the most photogenic city in the country," he said. "It's also the most accepting city. It contains some of the brightest minds in America. . . But there's an odd mixture of the highly intellectual community and the crazy community."

The "crazy community" bloomed in the 1960s. Long-haired young people calling themselves hippies and flower children swarmed into San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury district.

They were turned off by the Vietnam war and turned on by the prophet of LSD, Timothy Leary.

The flower children were hallucinating on drugs. "We were riding on the wind," one of them would remember. Her name was Lynette (Squeaky) Fromme. Years later, she would try to kill a president.

She came to San Francisco with the Charles Manson family in 1968. Manson had passed through Haight Ashbury earlier, staying long enough to learn the power of drugs and the word love. He took his group to Los Angeles and ordered mass murders.

In Haight Ashbury, teenagers "freaked out" screaming in the agony of LSD "bad trips."

Some died after taking street drugs laced with strychnine. Some committed murder. Those who survived drifted to drug rehabilitation centers or moved away.

But the plague they had brought did not die. It festered and burst in the '70s, San Francisco's most violent decade since the days of the Barbary Coast.

In 1969 and 1970, a murderer calling himself Zodiac sent grisly coded messages to local newspapers.

"Killing people is more fun than killing wild game," he wrote.

Zodiac's missives have continued sporadically. He has not been caught. Police say he probably killed six persons. He boasts of slaying 37 victims.

In 1972, a midwestern preacher, Rev. Jim Jones set up his Peoples Temple in San Francisco's poor Fillmore district.

In 1973, a wave of random street killings terrorized the city. The Zebra killers struck without warning, killing whites at night. Most victims were shot. One was raped, another beheaded.

In April 1974, four young Black Muslims were arrested and charged with 14 murders, seven assaults, one rape and an attempted kidnapping. The Zebra murderers were convicted in 1976 after the longest trial in San Francisco history.

On Feb.4, 1974, Patricia Hearst, daughter of one of San Francisco's first families, was kidnapped. Her travels through the radical underground exposed a seething subculture of disaffected young revolutionaries known as The Symbionese Liberation Army.

Six of them died that spring in a flaming, suicidal shootout with Los Angeles police. The others—Miss Hearst and William and Emily Harris—drifted back to San Francisco where they eluded police for 18 months before their capture Sept. 18, 1975.

Also that September, Lynette Fromme aimed a gun at then-President Gerald Ford in nearby Sacramento and was arrested. Days later in San Francisco, a middle-aged radical, Sara Jane Moore, fired a gun at Ford, barely missing him.

"Isn't anything happening anywhere but San Francisco?" a newscaster asked.

In 1976, Hearst, Moore and Fromme went to prison. Radical groups such as The New World Liberation Front bombed buildings and issued communiques.

In 1977, the plague seemed to pass. City fathers remembered the town's old slogan, Everybody's Favorite City. The city's large homosexual population savored political victory—election of Harvey Milk, the first gay member of the city's Board of Supervisors.

The following year, 1978, was one of promise. Record numbers of tourists jammed cable cars.

Then, on Nov. 18, another nightmare began.

Democratic Congressman Leo Ryan, investigating the Peoples Temple cult, was shot and killed on an airstrip in Guyana. Three newsmen and a temple defector were slain with him.

Within hours, a horror story unfolded. Hundreds of San Franciscans who had followed Jones to a promised paradise in Guyana obeyed his command to commit mass suicide. In the deep jungle, troops found more than 900 bodies.

Jones had been appointed director of the housing authority by Moscone. Thus, when the 49-year-old mayor was gunned down in his office Monday morning, speculation stirred of Peoples Temple involvement. There was none, police said. It was much simpler.

A disgruntled former supervisor, Dan White, was booked for investigation of murder. He had come to City Hall to seek reinstatement as a supervisor. Moscone had refused.

"I don't know how we're going to put this city back together again," said the citizen who called a late-night radio talk show to mourn for San Francisco.

Dockers End Strike

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — A strike by dock workers that virtually paralysed Indian ports for 11 days ended Monday, the Press Trust of India news agency reported.

Leaders of the All India Port and Dock Workers Federation agreed to a government appeal to call off the strike.

The port workers' demands a higher cost-of-living allowance.

HANDICAPPED SHOP TONIGHT

The ninth annual shopping party for handicapped adults and children will be held at Woodward's starting at 6 tonight.

About 1,000 adults and 50 children are expected to participate in the carol singing and shopping, said advertising and promotion manager Wilf Dick.

Woodward's employees will donate their time to act as guides for the blind and to push wheelchairs.

The Salvation Army will serve refreshments.

The singalong program will include old favorites as well as Christmas carols.

Santa Claus will hand out bags of oranges and candy.

A free photo posing with Santa will be given to each participant.

The idea was brought to Victoria by former Woodward's employee Tom Farrell who saw a department store in England doing it.

With the success of the Victoria program, other Woodward's stores began to copy the idea. Farrell will be at the store to participate in tonight's program.

Freight elevators will be available for those who cannot use the store's escalators.

When today's deal was played in a team-of-four match, both South declarers arrived at the identical game contract. Neither of them had any control over their destinies. Their fates rested on how the East players defended the hand.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

East played the encouraging nine on West's heart opening lead, and at trick two West contined with the heart queen, on which East followed with the deuce. To trick three West returned a low heart, declarer trumping East's ace.

The ace and king of trumps were now cashed, felling East's queen. Next came the king, ace and queen of diamonds, eliminating the diamond suit from both the North and South hands. The deuce of clubs was then led off dummy, declarer inserting his nine after east had followed with a low club. West won this trick with his ten — and, simultaneously, became the victim of an end play.

If West returned a heart or a diamond, dummy would trump; and on this trick South would discard his club queen. And if West played back a club (as he actually did), with the hope that his partner had the queen, South's queen would become a winner and his game-going trick.

When the deal was replayed, our new West defender also opened the heart king against South's four-spade contract, on which East played the nine-spot. West, at trick two, also continued with the heart queen. But this East defender overtook the queen with the ace, on the reasoning that if South possessed three losing hearts, he probably would not have jumped directly to four spades over North's single raise to two spades.

To trick three East led the three of clubs, and no matter what South played, it became impossible for him to avoid losing two club tricks and his contract. And, as an extra, East spared West the aggravation and embarrassment of being end played.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get more-than-usual response to efforts. You finish task — your views are vindicated. Aries is in picture. Relatives, visits, ideas figure prominently. You are capable now of separating mere talk from viable plan or promotion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on valuables, personal possessions, collector's items, locating misplaced items. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. New approach results in profit. You get proverbial second chance where love is concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take initiative, get going on fresh concept, new project. Vitality comes back — extra effort will be good for significant yardage. Be direct, confident. Judgment, intuition are apt to be on target. Assert yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What had been a dreary situation might now rebound and be cause for celebration. Gemini, Sagittarius persons are part of scenario. Be versatile, display humor, show that you have been painted into corner. Yes, you will gain access to privileged information.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on creativity, challenge, change, results on business venture. Another Aquarian could be in picture. You succeed through unorthodox procedures. Reach beyond supposed limitation. No one can stop you — except you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Special commendation, honor could be on agenda. Make concession without abandoning principles. Virgo, Sagittarius persons play important roles. Emphasis on career, reputation, dedication to a cause. You receive favorable publicity.

IF NOVEMBER 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intuitive, a natural psychologist and teacher. You are sensitive, emotional and have digestive problems. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo persons play significant roles in your life. You've been through a trying, challenging year. In 1979, you travel, meet more people — you'll be happier, luckier and you may have a weight problem. Career advances. You have more resonsbility and authority — money picture is bright, but inflationary. Means you have more to spend, but you buy less for it than in recent times.

DRUGS MOOTED IN STABBINGS

OTTAWA (CP) — The man who stabbed two prison employees to death at Collins Bay prison Sunday and wounded a third may have been under the influence of intoxicants, Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais speculated in the Commons Monday.

Francis Eustace, 56, a guard, and Paul Maurice, 40, a kitchen employee were stabbed to death in the incident, and Frank Duvall, 56, food services supervisor at Collins Bay, a federal medium-security prison in the Kingston, Ont., area, suffered stab wounds.

Hugh Daniel MacDonald, 36, a prisoner who worked in the kitchen, was arrested by police.

MacDonald, serving 3½ years for manslaughter, was described as a model prisoner, a stable person, and an industrious worker at Collins Bay.

He was being considered for day parole when the incident occurred as lunch was being served to other prisoners.

An initial report from Collins Bay said the slayer may have been under the influence of unidentified intoxicants, which could mean anything from homebrew to "speed" pills such as dexedrine.

Prison officials related the slaying to two other drug-induced prison killings in the early 1970s.

In one, a prisoner who had 18 days left to serve hammered a shop instructor to death at Cowansville, a medium-security prison in Quebec.

In the other, a shop instructor at Stony Mountain Penitentiary in Manitoba was killed by a prisoner under the influence of drugs.

Gale-Torn Plumes Need Tending

GARDENING
jack beastall

A beautiful ornamental plant which suffered damage in the gale a week ago was the small, plumed type of the Pampas Grass. The large, plumed types are still seen gracing gardens, making an outstanding feature for this time of year.

Some home gardeners have already cut down the broken flower stems, while others have left them hanging over fences and adjacent shrubs.

If for no other reason than appearance, these broken stems should be removed.

Gardeners who have grown the Pampas Grass for years have a respect for the toothed edges of the leaves that can cut deeply into skin surfaces and tear woolen clothing.

Since the stems should be cut as low as possible, good stout gloves are needed to protect the hands and wrists while working among the leaves, and clothing of the waterproof type with a smooth surface.

Part the leaves carefully keeping them clear of the face and neck, follow the stems to as near their bases as possible, and cut with a pair of well-sharpened hand secateurs.

If the smaller type plumes now have a wind-torn appearance, it would be wise to remove them all while dressed for the job.

While on the subject of Pampas Grass, a few words about the "burning" which is mentioned as necessary, in English gardening books.

Some gardeners take this to mean burning the entire plant to the ground. One gardener piled the fruit tree prunings on a pampas and had a real bonfire. Fortunately the roots were not severely damaged, but it was many years before the plant regained its beauty.

The purpose behind this "burning" is to remove the mass of leaf attachments which remain low down in the plant when the older leaves have died and come away. These remaining attachments have the appearance of wood shavings.

To do this without damaging the plants a flash fire is necessary, and the English books recommend February as the best time, before the new leaves have developed.

In a mild, damp winter climate, these shavings can cause rotting of the new leaves which come from the centre of the plant if allowed to accumulate.

In my experience, a flash fire is impossible in February. The shavings are sodden wet and refuse to burn. By the time they have dried, usually late April to May, a fire damages the tender new foliage which has already elongated.

Although a troublesome job, the best course to follow in our climate is to pull out, and where necessary to cut off, as many of these old leaf attachments as possible to allow air to reach the centre of the plant. This can be done in late February or in March.

On a large plant I find it handy to part the leaves and hold them out of the way with pieces of shiplap or two-by-fours while working in the exposed area. It is much easier than trying to tie the toothed leaves with string.

One thing you will notice in the next few months is a yellowing of some leaves. Do not remove these now because the green will return to many of them in late April.

Those that fail to green up can be cut off at that date because they have been discarded by the plant.

The work to do now is the removal of those unsightly broken flower stems, and wind-blown plumes which have lost their beauty.

Treu Appeal Lawyer Cites Legal Errors, Distorted Evidence

PETER TREU

MONTREAL (CP) — An "irrelevant" document referring to China's air defences helped "poison the judge's mind" against engineer Alexander Peter Treu who was convicted of violating the Official Secrets Act, Treu's lawyer Michel Chabot told Quebec Court of Appeals Monday.

The Chinese element was introduced by the Crown to "set up the atmosphere of a spy case," Chabot said.

Monday's hearing was a rare glimpse for the public of evidence presented at the secret trial which led to Treu's two-year sentence for unlawfully retaining and failing to take reasonable care of NATO documents.

The three justices hearing the case reserved judgment but their ruling is expected before year's end. Whatever the outcome, it will likely be appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Treu's sessions court trial was held entirely behind closed doors as permitted by the official secrets legislation. Treu was convicted on the charges April 28.

Since only points of law were discussed before Mr. Justice Fred Kaufman, Mr. Justice Rodolphe Pare and Mr. Justice Andre Dube, with no detailed discussion of NATO papers and related defence arrangements, the three-hour appeal hearing was held in public with the consent of Chabot and federal prosecutor Francois Handfield.

Chabot said Treu was unjustly convicted because of the "the atmosphere of espionage" pervading his trial, but Handfield contended the engineer was a respected scientist who had turned to "white collar crime" in failing to handle papers according to strict government security procedures.

Treu had used the papers to work at home on a NATO ground-to-air communications system which was part of the alliance's European air defence, but Judge Luc Trudel ruled in sessions court that he broke the law by storing them in his basement office.

Chabot said Treu was only charged with a technical violation of the act, but the prosecution had succeeded in converting Judge Trudel to the irrational belief that Treu "was a spy who was preparing to betray his country."

He also argued that presentation of the prospectus did not follow court procedure because the original NATO document was never entered as evidence.

If the appeals court rules that such a NATO document should have been produced, it must automatically free Treu or order a new trial, he said.

Treu "formally denies" he drafted the prospectus from the NATO document in question, he added.

The secret trial raised a storm of controversy in the Commons last spring and Chabot said subsequent news reports about allegations that Treu possibly provided information to the Chinese could have influenced Judge Trudel into believing he was a spy, although the charges contained no such allegations.

Handfield said the Chinese prospectus was a "cornerstone" of the prosecution case, used to call Treu's credibility into question. He said it was based not only on the NATO document referred to, but also on six others Treu had retained.

The lawyers also debated whether Treu had actually violated federal government and NATO security-clearance procedures.

They agreed Treu had clearance to use classified papers when he was working for Northern Electric, now Northern Telecom Ltd., as the chief communications engineer on the NATO contract.

Treu took on the contract himself in February, 1973, transferring it to his own company, Canalatin Consultants Ltd., after Northern dropped the project in December, 1972, the lawyers said.

Treu retained a security clearance until August, 1973, when he left Northern and took NATO papers with him to continue work on the project. He applied for a new security clearance in the name of Canalatin in June, 1973, but received no answer.

Chabot said Treu was led to believe he had been cleared because after making his application in June he was invited to an Ottawa meeting to which only persons with up-to-date clearances were admitted. He also received a classified document from NATO at this time.

Handfield countered that after 10 years of work on NATO contracts, Treu was well aware of security procedures — that only persons with security clearances and the "need to know" could use classified papers.

Chabot said that even if the conviction was upheld Treu's sentence was excessive because he had suffered loss of professional reputation and severe financial hardship as a result of the trial.

Treu's wife had left him with two of their children and filed for separation since he was sentenced last May, the lawyer added.

Murder Appeal Granted

CALGARY (CP) — A man sentenced to life imprisonment for the first-degree murder of a city taxi driver was given permission Monday to pursue an appeal he abandoned last spring.

Christian Kjeldsen, 28, who is serving his sentence at the Prince Albert Penitentiary, was convicted last December of murdering taxi driver Glenda Ferster, 20, in February, 1977.

Chief Justice J. V. H. Milvain of Alberta Supreme Court sentenced Kjeldsen life imprisonment without eligibility for parole for 25 years.

Kjeldsen filed an appeal, but dropped it last May after a breakdown in communications resulted in some confusion with legal aid authorities over whether he would be represented by a lawyer in his appeal.

Pituitary Gland Removal From Corpses Sought

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation which would allow the removal of a pituitary gland by a pathologist for use by children with a deficiency of the growth hormone was introduced Monday in the Ontario legislature.

Attorney-General Roy McMurtry told the legislature that the legislation would help between 100 and 200 Ontario children.

The bill, an amendment to the Coroners Act, would allow a pathologist during the course of a coroner's autopsy to remove the deceased person's pituitary gland and to retain it for use in helping children with a growth-hormone deficiency.

Under the amendment, the procedure would be followed unless the pathologist is aware that the deceased person or members of the deceased person's family would object.

The pituitary gland routinely is removed and studied as part of a post-mortem examination, McMurtry said.

Children with hormone deficiency can be treated successfully through injections of an extract made from the pituitary glands.

The hormone deficiency results in a form of dwarfism.

Earlier this year, Monty Davidson (NDP—Cambridge) introduced a private member's bill, which would have allowed the removal and use of pituitary gland where mandatory autopsies are required by law.

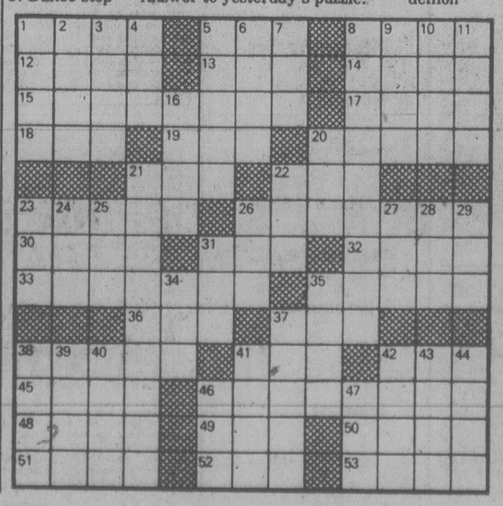
Answer to yesterday's puzzle.



Gov't Blamed For MD Flight

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs Monday slapped the federal government on grounds it failed to support medical researchers, thereby forcing hundreds of young doctors to leave the country.

Paul Yewchuk, (PC—Athabasca) a medical doctor, told the Commons the government welched on its commitment to provide funding for training for health professionals and to acquire research equipment.

Yewchuk accused Health Minister Monique Begin of making a unilateral decision to chop federal funding of the $500 million health resources fund.

The joint federal-provincial program was terminated as part of the government's spending restraint program announced in late summer.

Miss Begin defended the decision, arguing that about 85 per cent of the funds had been utilized.

"What is important to know is that basically, the fund did the job it was supposed to do," the minister said.

The government will still make payments on programs approved up until this fall. But under legislation now before the Commons the government may reduce the size of payments.

Miss Begin said the program had accomplished a great deal but "regretfully it is to be terminated now because of the difficult conditions in the country."

Yewchuk, Conservative health critic, said researchers have blasted the government for providing the lowest level of support to the sciences among western countries.

The Manitoba MP also criticized Miss Begin for failing to consult the provinces before making the decision to end the program.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said the government's "stop-and-go" approach to research funding has been a disaster.

Government refusal to fund research work was almost an invitation for the country's young doctors and scientists to leave for the United States, Orlikow said.

Effort Advocated

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — "Students don't see the benefits of hard work in school anymore," William Glasser, a California psychiatrist, told Grey County teachers recently. He said that — with the exception of athletics and violence — people on TV rarely undertake any action which illustrates effort.

THE DAILY COLONIST AND VICTORIA TIMES

Jonestown Silent, Eerie

By LEW WHEATON

JONESTOWN, Guyana (AP) — The bodies are gone at the the Peoples Temple colony where about 900 Americans perished in a bizarre mass suicide-murder ritual Nov. 18.

The only noises Monday were made by wildlife in the nearby rain forest and by workmen driving home nails on shuttered windows and doors of cottages. The blows reverberated, sounding like a wooden coffin was being sealed.

Tropical showers have left puddles in open areas of the former religious settlement but have not washed away the stench of death where rotting bodies lay for a week before transportation back to the United States.

Dark puddles teeming with maggots in cult leader Jim Jones's house and in the open-air meeting hall marked the places where people fell, convulsed and died of cyanide poisoning.

Maj. Ronald Johnson of the Guyana Defence Force said his troops have full control of the colony.

Soldiers standing guard in the meeting hall held their hats over their noses against the smell.

Johnson said there had been some looting. Piles of clothing and scattered lipsticks, eyeglasses and other personal articles still littered the cleared site.

He said he has no idea what would be done with the camp. A government spokesman in Georgetown said the government will not let the jungle overcome the site and that it might be used again but under Guyanese control.

The information ministry said the area will be sealed off effective today.

The jungle rises like an irregular wall around the colony's cleared area, a roughly circular patch of about 900 acres, 140 kilometres from the capital of Georgetown.

Jones's three-room home, isolated from most camp dwellings by 100 metres of lawn and peanut patches, has been rifled.

Magazines and books littered the floor of the beamed house and on the floor of its partially screened porch.

Lenin in Profile was next to a copy of Time magazine and an edition of the Manchester Guardian.

Flies buzzed over dark pools on the floor in the bedroom and front room and maggots crawled on stains on a bunk bed in the front room, where possessions of children were scattered.

A safe and file cabinet stood open and empty.

Great quantities of medical equipment and drugs filled shelves and cabinets in the Jones's dwelling, perhaps backing reports Jones was ill.

A one-metre high white oxygen tank stood next to Jones's mosquito net-draped bed. A small refrigerator at the end of the bed held a large supply of medications, from vitamins to ginseng root extract.

Persecuted, Say Russians

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's leading newspaper says members of the Peoples Temple were U.S. dissidents whose mass murder-suicide has "cast a shadow on the prestige of the United States and the American way of life."

Pravda, the Soviet Communist party newspaper, said the U.S. media are trying to convince Americans as well as foreign countries that the mass suicide in Guyana was the action of wild religious fanatics.

But other information shows they were "people in a condition of spiritual poverty in American society, which is incapable of giving a person a perspective of life," the commentary said. "They were striving for social, economic and racial equality and justice."

Pravda conceded that religious mystics, criminal elements and other renegades from society were among the group. But the majority, it said, were unwanted people who were subjected to harassment and persecution in the United States and had to leave their country.

In the jungles of Guyana, Pravda said, they lived in fear that even there the "punishing hand of American authorities would reach them." They were afraid for their children whom they expected to lose and were expecting an attack on their settlement.

The article said no one could tell exactly what occurred in the final days, but it was "another page that illustrates the tragic fate of American dissidents."

The Employment Tax Credit Program was introduced by the Government of Canada to stimulate employment in the private sector.

In essence, we're encouraging you to expand your work force by providing a tax break for your business.

The potential annual tax credit for each new employee is over $3,000. And there is no limit to the number of new employees you can hire.

Now, by using the experience we've gained so far, we've changed the program to make it even more attractive.

Up to 33⅓% more tax credit.

The maximum term for the tax credit has been increased from nine to 12 months for each new employee. That means up to 33⅓% more tax credit.

Greater eligibility.

We have expanded the number and types of businesses eligible to benefit. Now almost every business that's been operating in Canada for a year or more can join in.

Wider choice of new employees.

Now, almost anyone who's unemployed and registered at a Canada Employment Centre for a minimum of two weeks is eligible.

A minimum of red tape.

We've simplified the procedure, so you can do the whole thing, from beginning to end, with just two single-page forms.

For full details on the program, contact any Canada Employment Centre/Canada Manpower Centre.

Father Takes Revenge, Kills Chained Prisoner Before Trial

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — As the chained prisoners were being led from the paddy wagon Monday, a man stepped calmly from the crowd, pulled a .38-calibre pistol and fired six shots point-blank into the prisoner accused of killing his two sons.

Then Juan Rodriguez, a 57-year-old retired civil service worker, dropped his pistol on the courthouse sidewalk and surrendered.

"He didn't try to escape or nothing. He just had a job to do and he had done it," said a deputy. "Then he just put the gun down and gave up.

Rodriguez was charged with murder in the death of Jimmy Garza, 31. Garza was being taken to the courthouse to be tried in the shooting deaths of Rodriguez' sons, Alfredo, 32, and Eleodoro, 38, at a bar on Aug. 13, 1977.

Garza was one of 15 chained prisoners being taken to the Bexar County Courthouse.

"The paddy wagon had just pulled up and the prisoners were being led into the courthouse," the deputy said.

"Then one man in the crowd just pulled out a gun and emptied it into that old boy."

No other injuries were reported.

Police said Rodriguez was not considered a troublemaker and was a reserve Bexar County deputy sheriff until his sons were killed.

Attorney Julie Marquez, who represented Garza, said her client stayed in jail rather than go free on bond because his life had been threatened.

The lawyer said Garza told her he thought the threats came from the elder Rodriguez.

Mrs. Marquez, who was waiting for Garza to appear when she learned of his death, said her client planned to plead self-defence in the killings of the Rodriguez brothers, claiming he shot them because they were beating him with pool cues.

CLEANING FLUIDS EYED IN INN BLAZE

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Tests are being conducted to determine if cleaning fluids kept in a storeroom may have combined to ignite a motel fire in suburban Greece which killed 10 persons Sunday, a fire investigator says.

The fluids were delivered Friday to the three-storey, 91-room Holiday Inn-Northwest and stored beneath a stairwell where the blaze is thought to have started, investigator Mike Fantagrossi of the Monroe County district attorney's office said Monday.

He said he expects results today on tests on the ammonia- and chlorine-based cleaning fluids.

"We've ruled out electrical (causes), ruled out the possibility of any heating equipment," Fantagrossi said.

However, Lieut. John Rein of the Greece police department said arson has not been ruled out.

Six Toronto women injured in the fire were released from hospital Monday. Six other Ontario women are still in hospital.

The Canadians who died were identified as E. F. Farley, his wife, Ruby Cushinan, 81, and her daugher, Ruby, and Margaret Duncan, 57 — all of Toronto — and Mrs. Duncan's daughters-in-law, Pamela Sundue, 30, of Toronto and Huguette Sundue, 33, of Brampton, Ont.

Rhodesia Death List Linked to Mugabe

SALISBURY (UPI) — Rhodesia's government has released what it says is a guerrilla "death list" threatening 54 black officials with death or arrest for co-operating with Prime Minister Ian Smith's regime.

A record 1,834 whites, frightened by the prospect of a black takeover, fled Rhodesia in October to escape the escalating fighting, which the government said Monday had taken another 51 lives.

The government said the death list was compiled by Robert Mugabe's wing of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance in the Mozambican capital of Maputo on Nov. 13. Officials would not explain how it was captured in its entirety.

The document threatens the arrest or assassination of 54 blacks and one Indian member of a black party, all of whom are associated with Smith's biracial interim government.

The document refers to several classes of enemies. The three black leaders who sit with Smith on the ruling executive council — Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and tribal Chief Jeremiah Chirau — as well as nine other high-ranking blacks have the word "traitor" preceding their names.

Lesser offenders, including all 16 black members of the white-dominated parliament, go by the titles "puppet," "opportunist," "opportunist puppet," "criminal," "criminal puppet," "puppet and criminal" and "puppet traitor."

He who does not "becomes a priority military target. You are liable to be arrested or shot on sight . . . The arm of the revolution is long, very long indeed."

The Monthly Digest of Statistics showed Monday that 252 whites came to Rhodesia in October while 1,834 emigrated, leaving a negative balance of 1,582.

The only higher monthly loss of whites through emigration — 1,634 — was recorded in December, 1963 during unrest resulting from the breakup of a federation comprising what are now Rhodesia, Zambia and Malawi.

An army communique said Rhodesian troops killed 25 black guerrillas and eight collaborators while suffering the loss of two soldiers.

French TV For Nixon

PARIS (Reuter) — Former U.S. president Richard Nixon shook hands with people outside his hotel Monday amid a throng of reporters and photographers.

Nixon, 65, who arrived Saturday for a private visit, will appear on television tonight to answer questions almost certain to cover the Watergate scandal which led to his resignation in 1974.

Nixon told reporters earlier he does not intend to return to the political arena.

HEIR TO BREZHNEV?

Konstantin Chernenko

MOSCOW (AP) — Another possible successor to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev has emerged with the promotion in the politburo of Konstantin Chernenko, one of his close associates.

In a series of Kremlin shifts announced Monday night, Chernenko, 67, advanced from candidate member to full member of the Communist party's top, 13-member policy-making body. The promotion capped a 2½-year rise during which he apparently has taken over part of Brezhnev's load in party matters.

Brezhnev has given no public sign that he plans to relinquish either the presidency or the general secretaryship of the Communist party, the most powerful post in the Soviet Union. But he is almost 72 and ailing.

One theory has been that Brezhnev will be succeeded by Andrei Kirilenko, a politburo member and close associate who runs the party apparatus. But he would probably be an interim choice since he is 72.

U.S. Reported Ready To Hike Refugee Limit

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — Refugee officials say more than 2,000 Vietnamese refugees will be flown from Malaysia to the United States in two or three weeks. And the Carter administration is reported planning to seek congressional approval to admit about 22,500 Indochinese refugees before next May 1.

Meanwhile, a second group of 160 refugees left here today for Montreal. Canada has accepted 604 persons from the frieghter Hai Hong. The first planeload of 159 refugees arrived Sunday morning in Montreal.

U.S. justice department officials in Washington said Attorney-General Griffin Bell will ask Congress to approve admission of 22,500 refugees before next May 1. They would be in addition to the annual quota of 25,000, which is already filled, and would include the 2,500 accepted after the Hai Hong incident.

Prostitutes Threaten To Expose Prominent Clientele

LONDON (Reuter) — British prostitutes at a conference Monday called on prominent clients to identify themselves publicly and stop condemning to the world what they practise in private.

The English Collective of Prostitutes theatened last week to start naming clients — who they said included prominent politicians, priests and police chiefs.

The conference was called to back the collective's demands for prostitution to be put on a legal basis.

The collective's organizer, Helen Buckingham, told the conference: "Abolish prostitution laws and prostitutes themselves will disappear, giving way to sex therapists."

About 200 persons, including prostitutes, priests and women's rights activists, attended the conference.

Letters of support were read from prostitutes' groups in San Francisco, New York and Paris.

Stunning Party Primary Ousts Japanese PM

. . . flabbergasted

Times News Services

TOKYO — After suffering a stunning loss in preliminary voting by members of the Liberal Democratic Party (LDP), Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda abruptly abandoned his re-election campaign Monday night and promised to co-operate with his successor, Masayoshi Ohira.

His withdrawal meant the almost certain election of Ohira, 68, who pulled off an unexpected victory in voting for party president by some 1.5 million party members.

Ohira was to meet with leaders of the LDP's five factions to discuss the composition of his cabinet.

The meeting of party parliamentarians Friday to make the final choice is regarded as only a formality, meaning Ohira would be declared prime minister by special session of parliament next week.

In a brief news conference several hours after the returns were counted, the 73-year-old Fukuda said he was flabbergasted by his loss.

The election Monday was a kind of advisory primary — the first in Japanese history — in which 1.5 million party members indicated their choice of four candidates. The two leading candidates were supposed to face each other Friday in a vote only among party members serving in parliament.

The final returns showed that Fukuda got 472,523 votes to Ohira's 550,891. Two other candidates, Yasuhiro Nakasone and Toshio Komoto, split the remainder and were automatically eliminated.

Fukuda's defeat represented a show of force by his long-time rival, former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, who was forced to resign after a money-and-politics scandal in 1974.

Tanaka, who is still on trial in the Lockheed scandal, retains a sizable LDP following.

Ohira's ascendancy is not expected to cause any sharp changes in Japanese policy.

Ohira and Fukuda are cut from the same mold. Both began their careers as bureaucrats in the finance ministry.

Ohira, who holds the influential position of secretary-general of the LDP, declined to speculate Monday night on what direction his government would take. He said his first task is to unite the party in order to face Japan's domestic and international problems.

For Fukuda, the election results came at a time when his administration was enjoying a relatively high degree of popularity.

But Fukuda came back this year to win praise for a series of international developments, the most important being the signing of a treaty of peace and friendship with China.

The election that brought him down was an unusual affair. In the past, the party presidency has been decided only by members of the LDP in parliament. After the money-and-politics scandal of the early 1970s, it was decided to broaden the election process to include a preferential primary. Anyone could vote in it by joining the party for a fee of 1,500 yen, about $7.50.

Troops Attack Cortege As Oil Strikes Persist

TEHRAN (AP) — Mourners in a funeral procession clashed briefly with armed troops today and witnesses said several persons were shot and wounded.

Martial law authorities in Tehran had banned the funeral procession for Ayutullah Gharavi, a Moslem religious leader who died Monday of natural causes.

About 3,000 persons were in the procession when troops moved in near the main bazaar hurling tear-gas grenades and firing shots. A witness said several persons were hit, but he was unable to say how seriously they were hurt.

The mourners scattered, but tension remained high. Soldiers armed with automatic weapons broke up small groups in narrow lanes near the bazaar.

It was the only violence reported in more than 24 hours. But wildcat strikes at the Tehran refinery shut down the capital's gas stations.

The refinery, about 30 kilometres from here, has been the scene of frequent strikes. Independent sources said about half the staff walked out, including tank-truck drivers. Army personnel were expected to be moved in as strike breakers as they have before.

A second strike that began Sunday at the Shiraz refinery in southwestern Iran was described as 100-per-cent effective. Reports said it had shut down all gas stations in southern Iran.

The strikers at Shiraz are demanding political concessions from Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, including the release of all persons arrested since martial law was imposed Sept. 8 in 12 major cities.

National production of crude oil was reported back to normal after the 15-day oil industry strike which ended two weeks ago.

The shah is expected to name a new government after order is restored. Reliable sources who asked not to be identified said the monarch is leaning toward a non-political figure who would be acceptable to the religious leaders and to the shah's political opponents.

U.S. in Contact With Shah's Foes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is initiating contacts with opponents of the shah of Iran in the wake of domestic and political turmoil in that country, the Washington Post reports.

In its today's editions, the Post quotes unnamed Carter administration officials as saying the United States has informed the shah that it is continuing contacts with Iranian dissidents.

The United States has had little contact with opponents of the shah in the past. But Iranian leftists and conservative Moslems have joined together in bloody demonstrations demanding his ouster.

The Post says U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski are preparing a report for President Carter on U.S intelligence failures concerning Iran.

Carter was reported to have written a memorandum Nov. 11 complaining about the quality of "political intelligence," especially as it concerns Iran.

Mascots Mocking Moscow?

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Russian factory managers were accused today of falling down on the job of mass-producing Misha the bear — official mascot of the 1980 Olympic Games here.

The youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda said the turnout of approved Misha souvenirs was totally inadequate to meet a vast demand in the Soviet Union and abroad.

The paper charged that many of the souvenirs, made of rubber, plastic or porcelain, were either trashy or bore no resemblance to the official design. And it said that Misha soft toys were not yet being made on a mass scale.

'TRAPPED IN PLANNING'

Big Works Push Stressed by PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau today urged provincial premiers to push ahead quickly on major public construction projects to create jobs.

"I cannot help feeling that too many projects have been trapped in the planning stages for too long," Trudeau said as he kicked off discussions on industrial development at the second day of a three-day economic conference with the 10 provincial leaders.

Trudeau said that Canada had been able to reach agreement in a few weeks with the United States on construction of a $12-billion natural gas pipeline to move Alaskan gas to U.S. markets.

Yet there still had been no agreement with the provinces on several critical job-generating projects. He cited the need for improved grain handling systems—ranging from better railways to more efficient ports-and energy projects such as the proposed natural gas pipeline from Montreal to Eastern Quebec and the Maritimes.

He said that although all governments agreed their spending must be restrained, it was important to recognize these major capital projects would require significant government financial involvement.

Trudeau said that he would expect the private sector to take the lead in producing major new projects but "initiatives such as these will require (government) funding and support."

He said government spending in the construction of ports, highways, railways, and energy projects had contributed to the economic prosperity of the country. The government had to continue this role.

Trudeau's call for agreement on major new capital projects-which create jobs in the short term and contribute to overall economic growth in the long term-coincided with the position of Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney at the conference Monday.

Blakeney did not name specific projects but said governments should take the lead in energy development and major construction programs.

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque said it was one thing for Trudeau to talk about the need for federal initiatives for major developments. But he said provincial priorities must be respected.

Monday, the government leaders found themselves split along regional and ideological lines over the question of whether the government should step into areas where the private sector was unable or unwilling to act.

Blakeney, for example, pushed the government leaders to "take the lead in moving ahead rapidly and massively with capital projects" in the energy field.

British Columbia's Willian Bennett and Sterling Lyon of Manitoba objected to Ottawa backing the Crown-owned Petro Canada's takeover of Pacific Petroleum.

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque was skeptical about joint economic action between his government and the federal government, saying, "it just isn't working."

He hinted the federal government is deliberately trying to undermine his government's attempts at economic recovery, and presented a list

★ Still Uphill Struggle

OTTAWA (CP) — As top federal and provincial leaders Monday began their three-day economic meeting, two government agencies, Statistics Canada and the Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity, released reports that showed the economy still faces an uphill struggle in the post-wage-and-price-controls period.

Statistics Canada figures showed the rate of growth in the economy for the third quarter of the year as only 3.6 per cent on an annual basis.

This compared with growth at a 4.4 per cent rate in the second quarter and 2.8 per cent in the first quarter. It prompted Robert Andras, head of the newly-created cabinet board of economic ministers, to concede that the reduced government projection of four per cent growth this year would not be met.

Minutes before the figures were released, Chretien had told the conference that "this year, the growth rate looks at best as being only about four per cent."

The government had earlier predicted that growth in the economy, as measured by

Lougheed Admits Free Air Passes

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed says he accepted free trips from CP Air because he believed Albertans would want him to take holidays and relax from the demands of his office.

"It was offered to me as the premier of Alberta," Lougheed said in a telephone interview today from Otawa.

"And I felt from the standpoint of the citizens of Alberta that they would want me whenever I could to get a decent break in the hope that I would get the rest to do a better job."

Lougheed has been criticized heavily by opposition leaders for accepting the free rides.

The controversy comes only one month after the Alberta government faced sharp criticism in two other issues of a similar nature.

In early November, it was discovered that government-appointed directors of Pacific Western Airlines were acting on behalf of the Progressive Conservative Party as collectors of financial donations.

In that case, Lougheed said he did not believe the directors' actions represented conflict of interests. He said it was only natural that the government would appoint businessmen with a philosphy similar to the government's.

Lougheed said he and his wife, Jean, flew to and from Hawaii Nov. 3 to 15 courtesy of CP Air.

The cost of the return fares would have been $942 economy class or $1,364 first class.

As premier, Lougheed receives a salary of $32,373 plus an extra cash indemnity of $16,185 for each legislative session.

Lougheed said he would have no objections if members of his cabinet and senior government employees accepted similar airline passes.

The leaders of the three opposition parties, while saying there was nothing illegal about the practice, questioned the premier's judgment.

"It was absolutely wrong," Liberal Leader Nick Taylor said.

"It's another example of a double standard at the top," said Grant Notley, New Democratic Party leader.

"He's shot his code of ethics so full of holes it has no credibility."

BRIDGES BAD BUT STAYING

Highways Minister Alex Fraser agreed Monday the Bailey bridges on the Blanshard extension have contributed to the recent rash of accidents, but said drivers are going to have to live with them.

The ministry won't install a permanent structure until the CNR application to abandon the line is resolved, and that could take as long as 12 months, Fraser said.

Since the new route to the Pat Bay Highway opened a couple of weeks ago, the intersection at Ravine Way just south of the two Bailey bridges has been the scene of several collisions.

Drivers on Ravine Way must look through a tangle of poles, signs and iron grillwork on the bridges while trying to enter the Blanshard extension.

And a number of drivers have been hit while trying to turn onto Ravine Way immediately after leaving the bridge.

Fraser said his ministry was opposed to the Baileys from the beginning but had no other choice because of the uncertainty of the rail line underneath.

Highways crews Monday began installing a raised median to prevent motorists from crossing Ravine Way which Fraser said should cut down on accidents.

Highways engineers are continuing to look for further solutions to the problem.

Socreds Got $1.5M: Dailly

An NDP MLA said today a list of lottery grants shows 32 grants worth $1.5 million went to projects in Social Credit ridings while NDP constituencies received only two grants valued at $100,000.

Burnaby North member Eileen Dailly said the breakdown proves the Socred government is using the grants as political patronage.

"This is a blatant misuse of public lottery funds to buy votes in Socred ridings," Dailly said.

She said some of the projects are obviously worthy but wondered if worthy projects only exist in Socred ridings.

The list is not complete because it does account for another $12 million in culture, health, sports, social events and heritage projects.

Dailly said a detailed breakdown of that remaining cash is now more essential than ever.

Also missing from the list is the $100,000 footbridge in the Coquitlam riding of Socred MLA George Kerster because the cheque has not yet been issued.

"So this means a total of 33 projects out of 35 in Social Credit ridings," Dailly said.

In compiling her figures Dailly excluded all grants that went to province-wide organizations such as the Salvation Army.

Lougheed Agrees To Skip Oil Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta confirmed today that his province and Ottawa have agreed on a plan to skip a Jan. 1 oil price increase of about three cents a gallon for gasoline and home-heating oil.

In return, the province will get $1 a barrel—three cents a gallon—increases next July 1 and again in January of 1980, Lougheed said in an interview just before the economic summit of the country's government leaders resumed.

Lougheed said the agreement gives Alberta "two solid increases" rather than having to renegotiate the entire oil price deal next spring. And for the consuming provinces, it gives them a seven-month break from the steady rise towards world prices.

In addition, Ottawa has agreed to press on with its plan to ship more Alberta gas into markets in Quebec and the Maritime provinces.

The two governments want the deal, negotiated last week, ratified by the other premiers. But there appeared to be few hurdles in the way of approval.

Premier Sterling Lyon of Manitoba said that it appeared Alberta and the federal government had "reached a reasonable compromise."

"If Alberta is satisfied, that's okay."

San Francisco Mourns Amid Tight Security

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Security was tightened around city hall today as San Francisco mourned the assassinations of Mayor George Moscone and city supervisor Harvey Milk, shot to death Monday allegedly by a former city official who thought the mayor had double-crossed him.

(Residents also queried "Why here?" as they pondered recent bizarre and brutal happenings in the Bay city. See story on page 23.)

The suspect, former supervisor Dan White, 32, was held in isolation at San Francisco's hall of justice, charged with two counts of murder.

Extra police were assigned to the other nine members of the board of supervisors, San Francisco's legislative body, and chief administrative officer Roger Boas ordered security measures tightened in the ornate domed city hall, already protected by guards and metal detectors at its main entrances.

"There was recently a suggestion to remove that," Boas said. "Now it will have to be strengthened."

The shootings took place separately at city hall late Monday morning, just before Moscone was to announce that he had decided against reappointing White to the board of supervisors.

The youthful-looking White, an ex-policeman and fireman, had resigned just 17 days before, but then asked for his job back.

Monday night more than 30,000 mourners carrying lighted candles solemnly marched to city hall to the slow beat of three drums in a gathering organized by leaders of the city's homosexual community. Milk was an avowed homosexual and leader of San Francisco's large homosexual population.

SUSPENSION NOTICE REQUIRED

B.C. will have to amend the automatic drivers' licence suspension provision in the Motor Vehicle Act following a Supreme Court of Canada decision concerning an Alberta driver Monday.

See How Your Help Is Spent

Victorians have always had big hearts and deep pockets when it comes to the annual Unitarian Service Committee appeal for funds.

Last year residents of this area contributed more than $30,000 to help USC executive director Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova and her fellow workers finance and organize self-help projects for needy people around the world.

Those donors can see Wednesday night just how valuable their dollars are in the USC's never-ending fight to combat poverty, ignorance and hunger in those under-privileged nations.

Dr. Hitschmanova is here in Victoria as part of a cross-Canada fund-raising tour and at 8 p.m. in the Georgian Lounge at the Empress Hotel, she'll present an up to-date picture of USC activities through a slide show.

Federal Job Applicants Probed - RCMP

TORONTO (CP) — A senior RCMP officer says that under a federal cabinet order issued in 1963, civil servants and persons who apply for federal jobs are investigated to determine their loyalty and reliability.

The order says that illicit sexual behavior can be part of investigations, Chief Supt. Michael Spooner, head of the RCMP security service in southeastern Ontario, told a royal commission Monday.

But despite this order a man once diagnosed as a manic depressive, sex pervert and pathological liar is still working for the federal government, he said.

The cabinet directive says that a person may be unreliable if he has character traits which could lead to indiscretion or dishonesty, or make him vulnerable to blackmail or coercion, he testified.

The directive says that such character traits "may be greed, debt, illicit sexual behavior, drunkenness, drug addiction, mental imbalance or such other aspect of character as might seriously affect his reliability," the chief superintendent said.

He said that if any derogatory information is obtained a file on the person is kept in Ottawa indefinitely, and reviewed every 10 years.

Spooner told the royal commission on confidentiality of health records that the man still working for the government also failed an RCMP security clearance.

"I understand he was re-assigned to another function that did not require the level of security clearance."

He said the information on the man was obtained from files of the Ontario Health Insurance Plan.

Cpl. Glen Gartshore of the RCMP spoke to Albert Board, director of the health plan's Hamilton office, before looking at the files. Claims records of all Ontario residents are kept on microfilm at the Hamilton office.

Spooner says he supports a change in security screening procedures for civil servants to prevent their medical records being examined without their consent.

Commission counsel Harvey Strosberg suggested to Spooner that applications for civil service jobs requiring security clearance include a consent form authorizing the RCMP to examine their medical and hospital records.

"I am in favor of such a consent form," said Spooner.

Big Public Works Boost Priority, Trudeau Stresses

Lougheed Cuts Oil Hike

Both he and Premier Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick said they don't like price increases, but added sooner or later the domestic price had to reach world levels.

The elements of an agreement on the touchy oil price issue came at a private meeting in Toronto last Thursday between federal Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie and Alberta Energy Minister Don Getty.

The surprise turn of events came late in the first day of a three-day federal-provincial economic conference when Trudeau urged them to be ready to discuss the pricing compromise when the talk turned to energy today.

He hoped they could "waltz to an agreement" during a dinner dance at the Governor-General's home Monday night.

But most premiers said following the day's session they had no idea what the suggested compromise would be although it may have been communicated to provincial energy ministers.

The deal follows by two weeks the failure of Ottawa in a federal-provincial energy ministers meeting to gain support for its proposals to skip a Jan. 1 oil price increase.

The position of the provinces at that point was that an agreement providing for the increase was signed with Ottawa. A deal was a deal and it should go ahead.

But if a deal has been reached privately with Alberta, it would allow the major consuming provinces to go along with skipping the price increase.

The federal government says it feels there will not be room for an increase without putting the domestic oil price, currently $12.75 a barrel in Alberta, above the U.S. price, something prohibited by an agreement reached with Alberta 18 months ago.

But, in any case, says Ottawa, it is time for consumers to have a pause from the steady rise towards world prices that has been in effect since 1974.

Some of the provinces, however, say they feel the main motivation behind the Ottawa move is the expected spring federal general election.

The federal-provincial pricing agreement runs out in January and it was up for renegotiation next spring. But the deal would be stretched through until January of 1980 under the new price proposal.

In an interview following the conference, Gillespie would only say that the elements of an agreement had been reached. But he added that the federal government still stood behind its proposal of no price increase on Jan. 1.

of cuts in federal transfer payments that he said were costing his government money.

Finance Minister Jean Chretien, alternating between French and English, said in an impassioned speech that the federal government had done much to help the Quebec economy, including protection for the Quebec-based textile, clothing and shoe industry, incentives to the mining industry and designation of Montreal for federal grants.

"What do you want," he said. "We are not perfect." He said the federal government was willing to talk with the provinces.

Federal plans to change the unemployment insurance program came under fire from two provinces Monday, the only two that had a chance to speak on the matter before the economic conference of first ministers adjourned for the day.

Labor Minister Allan Williams of British Columbia complained that the changes, that will reduce weekly payments and tighten eligibility requirements, were decided upon by the federal government without consultation with the provinces.

Bernard Landry, Quebec's minister of state for economic development, complained that payments will be cut by $360 million in his province without any adequate compensation coming from other new initiatives.

Both men stressed the need for concerted action of the federal and provincial governments in the area of job creation.

Williams suggested that the provinces should have a greater role in job creation. He even proposed that the federal government transfer the administration of job creation programs to the provinces.

Losses Expected To Reach $18,000

The combined loss is expected to total close to $18,000 following two house fires in Saanich early today.

No one was injured in the fires which extensively damaged the rear of a house at 584 Brookleigh and gutted an outside studio building at 4578 Hughes.

The Brookleigh fire, spotted by a neighbor at 1:51 a.m., was caused by someone placing a paper bag containing fireplace ashes on top of a woodpile at the rear of the house.

Fire officials estimated $7,000 damage to the building and another $2,500 to contents.

The house is owned by Mervin Hunter.

Firemen are still investigating the cause of the Hughes fire which broke out shortly after 5 a.m. and quickly engulfed the small building resulting in a loss of about $8,000, including $3,000 in contents.

Trustees Study Costs Of French Programs

Greater Victoria school board will examine French programs in district schools.

The board Monday approved a committee to study existing French programs and come up with a development guideline.

Trustee Mark Fisher said the board should decide what kind of financial aid it is willing to give to French instruction.

He said the establishment of the education ministry's French core curriculum next fall in schools with sufficient demand is a good reason to examine existing French programs.

Fisher suggested the board decide how much it's willing to spend before considering the matching federal funds available.

The board dropped plans to expand this year its basic French program — which consists of 20 minutes of French a day in some Victoria schools — because federal grants weren't as much as expected.

The district offers three kinds of elementary French instruction: basic, immersion and partial immersion.

the gross national product—the value of all goods and services produced—would increase at up to five per cent.

At the same time, an inflation study centre report showed that Canadian manufacturers were raising prices and profits rapidly this year in spite of wage increase demands levelling off.

The centre, an adjunct of the Economic Council of Canada, pointed in particular to the food and beverage industry, steel and pulp and paper as having shown rapid price and profit increases.

It said that although profits may be recovering from a low level during the controls period, continued rises could set off another round of higher demands for wage increases and a new inflationary spiral.

It also said there were serious questions about whether manufacturers have not been using the advantage of the depreciated value of the dollar, which has raised the price of competitive imported goods, to expand their markets at home.

It suggested they had been instead raising their prices to the new higher level of the domestic imports, and taking higher profits.

"The centre wants particularly to urge Canadian firms which compete with imports to use the depreciation to expand their markets rather than raising their prices up to the higher import level," the study said.

Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said Monday he would refer recent increases in lumber prices to the anti-inflation board and the Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity for examination.

Allmand made the commitment after David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said the government should investigate profit increases by major lumber-producing corporations of up to 119 per cent and price rises for lumber of 45 to 65 per cent.

Orlikow noted that while the profit and price increases were high, allowable wage increases were six per cent this year.

He said that there were indications that housing starts would decline next year because of high costs of home construction and mortgages.

But Andre Ouellet, minister responsible for housing, said he expected there will not be a substantial decline in construction in 1979 and that the target of one million new homes in five years was well on the way to being met.

The annual rate of housing starts is now about 200,000.

SAANICH APPROVES REZONING BID

Saanich council Monday night approved rezoning of a 1.5-acre site bounded by Carey, Vernon and Douglas for construction of a shopping mall by Trafalgar Developments Inc.

The 16,000-square-foot development near Mount View high school will include four restaurants, two retail stores and a bank. Vehicular access will be via Vernon and Carey.

Although the shopping centre will be on the fringe of the proposed Saanich town centre between Vernon and Seymour, municipal planner Gil Laurenson said it would not jeopardize plans for the much larger commercial development.

The developer will be required to pay Saanich $20,000 for needed sewer improvements and $1,200 for storm drainage connections.

There were no objectors at the public hearing.

Council also gave zoning approval for construction of a single-storey development on Oak to house a wholesale bakery outlet and warehouse.

Firefighters Mourn

Representatives from all Greater Victoria fire departments will attend funeral services Wednesday for Victoria firefighter Captain David Pye.

Pye, 58, a 32-year veteran of the force, died Saturday in Royal Jubilee two months after a heart attack.

A native of Victoria, he was active in several community and sports organizations.

The funeral, with fire department honors, will begin at 12:30 p.m. at McCall's, Johnson and Vancouver.

Got Heating Bill Blues? Get Advice . . . Free

By AB KENT
Times Staff

THE real chill from that frost on the roof hits home when the oil bill arrives.

A few days of sharply lower temperatures confirms the rising cost of keeping warm — even in temperate Victoria.

But how many people, helpless to do anything about fuel prices, know how to take advantage of money-saving methods of improving home and business energy efficiency, or to find out where to get free advice, or financial help?

Do-it-yourselfers are likely on top of the energy-saving game, with better home and business insulation and more efficient water and space-heating appliances.

But the rest of us need a starting point and some guidance on how to save on heating dollars.

Many inquiries go to Ted France, energy adviser to the B.C. ministry of energy, transport and communications, whose office gets phone requests for advice and sources of information.

France passes on suggestions on how to get material from appropriate sources and suggests inquiries should start with agencies already set up to deal with the public.

B.C. Hydro is one of these, together with federal services like CHIP (Canadian Home Insulation Program) and the Heat Line, a toll-free telephone link to the department of energy, mines and resources.

"There is great public interest in energy-saving," France said.

"There are many opportunities for economy, because it makes a lot of sense for people to use energy more efficiently.

"We are encouraged that people are interested and willing to do something about it," he said.

Industrial and commercial enterprises can get aid through a joint federal-provincial scanning program operated by the B.C. Energy Commission since September.

It involves a computerized energy bus which covers B.C. business, industrial and institutional structures with visits.

On request and free of charge, staff aboard the bus will monitor heat-loss and calculates technical details to upgrade insulation. The bus is now working on lower Vancouver Island.

Long-term programs will develop to provide a plan for the economic use of energy as technology improves and traditional sources change.

Meanwhile, consumers can take immediate steps to cut back or redirect energy needs while saving money.

They may start with advice on how to reduce waste at home by adopting good practices in use of electricity and heating fuel. The next step could be to install or upgrade building insulation, perhaps add a wood-burning stove, or the ultimate in supplemental heating — a solar collector or a heat pump.

If a typical B.C. family of four spends $400 a year for electricity alone, the addition of $300-$500 for oil or gas heating makes for a formidable total fuel bill.

But by economizing on room heating and by weatherstripping, insulating and giving the furnace proper maintenance, the saving on heating fuel can be up to 50 per cent.

Detailed information of this kind is available for the asking from any B.C. Hydro office, the federal energy, mines and resources department in Ottawa, the CHIP regional office PO Box 34180 Vancouver V6K 4N1 or phone collect 732-7295, or the Heat Line's toll-free Zenith 800-267-9563.

Consumers can learn how to obtain up to $350 for insulating pre-1946 houses and Hydro will explain how to get financing for insulation or installing thermal window glass of up to $500 at 10 per cent interest over two years paid through Hydro billing.

Similar information is available from any insulation or thermal window specialist or building supplier.

Persons interested in home solar projects may make valuable contacts through local chapters of the Solar Energy Society of Canada, whose spokesmen are Gil Parker, 2666 Quadra, 386-7643, or in Vancouver, Roger Bryanton, 1271 Howe, 689-1841.

Members of the society include architects, solar equipment manufacturers, engineers and designers familiar with the latest in commercial and homemade innovations for water and space heating.

Hydro has just published a new information kit for householders planning to build or renovate, covering all aspects of domestic energy including water heating, lighting and wiring, kitchen and laundry planning, heating systems and insulation, and solar energy.

IF a homeowner wants to know where and how badly heat is leaking out of his house, he can hire an infrared specialist to scan the building, a service which insulating firms may recommend.

Hydro has a similar, province-wide scheme under way in which whole communities are scanned by remote infrared sensor to show street by street which houses are poorly insulated. In three years, scanning aircraft are expected to heat-map every B.C. community.

In pursuit of long-term energy policy, the energy commission and Hydro are embarked on assessment of waste wood utilization, thermal coal power and geothermal energy sources.

France said B.C. is fortunate in having its own or nearby sources of oil, natural gas and hydroelectric power, giving it a better energy future than many parts of the world.

Instead of pressure to convert wind, solar or tidal energy, B.C. will probably become a leading developer of electricity through waste wood utilization, which is subject of joint research by the energy commission, federal energy, Hydro and the Council of Forest Industries.

Priority in Hiring For City Drivers

Local bus drivers laid off as a result of the sale of part of Pacific Coach Lines will be given hiring priority for Gray Line tour buses under new Seattle ownership.

Grayline of Seattle Inc. manager Edward Cedergren said today experienced Victoria drivers will be the first interviewed when hiring starts in February.

"We want good, experienced drivers and they will be the first people we will talk to."

Cedergren was responding to fears expressed by Pacific Coach Lines drivers that as many as 59 drivers might be laid off because parts of the bus company have been sold.

Cedergren said it would be a natural move for his company to approach experienced drivers who are laid off and offer them jobs on the tourist buses.

The hiring would be done by a Canadian management team which he will appoint over the winter.

He said purchase of Gray Line will be completed about Feb. 1 and hiring will start. Drivers would be needed for between 25 and 30 buses, he said.

Cedergren will sell package tours in Seattle, including tickets on the Marguerite and bus tours from dockside. The package will include admission to local attractions.

"This (bus line) purchase was a natural for us because we have been in the tourist business in Seattle for many years," he said.

The Victoria package tours will be organized at headquarters in Victoria and sold in a number of cities besides Seattle, Cedergren said.

Cedergren repeated an earlier pledge that all management and employees of the Victoria company will be Canadian despite the fact it will be owned by Americans.

There are 80 year-round drivers with Pacific Coach Lines plus about 40 seasonal drivers.

Q. Why does the island of Greenland have such a name when it lies in the Arctic and 85 per cent of it is covered in thick ice? D.P.

A. Viking explorers gave the island its name in the hope of attracting settlers even though only the coastal areas are green in the short summer. The population remains small because of the island's cold climate and few natural resources.

Q. We hear so much about the price of gold these days. Can you tell me when it was first discovered? E.S.

A. This is not known but gold cups and jewelry made as early as 3500 B.C. have been dug up at Ur in Mesopotamia (now Iraq). The skilled craftsmanship in the gold objects indicates the craft of working gold had been developed hundreds of years before they were made.

Q. Can you tell me how many fairy tales the Danish author Hans Christian Andersen wrote? N.M.

A. He published his first fairy tale in 1835 and had written 168 by the time he died 40 years later.

SUSPECT HELD IN CITY

City police have a 24-year-old man in custody following an attempted robbery in James Bay Monday afternoon.

The man was to have appeared in provincial court later today.

Police picked up the suspect a half hour after the owner of the Corner Confectionery, 501 Government, reported a man had demanded money.

When the clerk replied he had no money, and opened the till to prove it, the man fled.

In another incident Monday a bomb threat was phoned to the Princess Mary Restaurant, 344 Harbour, at about 10 a.m. Police arrested a 16-year-old boy about an hour later. The boy has been charged with making threats by telephone.

Police have had less success in solving the theft of about $2,500 from the Belfry theatre Sunday night.

The money, about $1,500 in cash and the rest in cheques, was kept in a cash box in a padlocked locker in the Belfry office, and went missing during a post-performance party ending the run of the musical Piaf.

Artistic director Don Shipley said the money, much of it raised in a $25-a-ticket benefit performance that evening, had been expected to keep the theatre going after a promised government grant failed to materialize.

2,000 Eye Jobs, Only 288 Hired At Post Office

The post office has selected 288 seasonal workers from 2,000 applicants to help with Christmas mail, which is already starting to flow through the Royal Oak plant.

"We will put 55 of them to work this week and most of the others will be needed early in December," post office information officer Buz Sawyer said.

"On Monday we handled almost 700,000 pieces of mail, up about 160,000 from an average Monday. Most of this was early Christmas mail for overseas."

Sawyer said there were a large number of cards and parcels destined for Australia as well as the usual high pile for the United Kingdom.

"We are handling a lot of parcels with Christmas stickers on them so the seasonal rush is under way."

The number of cards may be lower than usual, however, if the early trend continues.

In previous years, postal workers would see bundles of 50 or more Christmas cards tied together but this year so far the largest bundles have only about 25 cards.

"Maybe the price of cards and stamps is forcing people to be more selective."

The search for Christmas help began at the Canada Employment Centre one month ago when more than 2,000 applied for the jobs.

The CEC reduced this total to 305, most with experience in seasonal post office work, who were then interviewed by the post office.

From this total, 288 were selected which will be the maximum number hired. Last year just over 200 found work.

A maximum of 223 would be needed in the Royal Oak plant and up to 65 more might be hired at the downtown post office building at 1230 Government. Most of the seasonal workers will be sorters.

They are paid $3.60 an hour for inside work, $3.85 for outside.

In 1976 the Victoria post office hired 600 seasonal workers but that was before the introduction of mail sorting machines at the Royal Oak centre. Now the total is reduced to one-third, just over 200.

Sawyer said experienced postal workers get priority for the Christmas rush because of the short time they are employed. An untrained employee is just learning the job by the time the Christmas rush is over.

Long-Gone John Back from Space

Rhyming weather forecaster John Thomas, relegated to a back room role in the Atmospheric Environment Service for his lighthearted approach to weather reporting, will have a chance next month to once again wax lyrical for the Victoria area.

Thomas will be back at his old oratorical stand for three weeks while Patricia Bay airport forecaster Norman Dressler is on vacation Dec. 14-Jan. 7.

Editors and radio listeners welcomed the rhyming forecasts composed in Vancouver by Thomas to enliven the often dull, frequently wet, shape of west coast weather.

But a staid AES seems to feel there is a fine line between brightening and flippancy, and Thomas was sent into the satellite imagery interpretation section.

Saanich police are keeping one jump ahead of persistent speeders in the technology race.

Inspector Ted Owens says the department has just received a hand-held radar unit which can be used in any direction and operated either from a vehicle power source or independently from its own power pack dry-cell battery.

Better still (from the police point of view, if not the speed merchants') the gizmo is designed to thwart radar detection devices mounted in private vehicles.

As Owens puts it in an official memo: "The unit does not emit a signal until you pull the trigger, at which time the speed is recorded and it is too late for the violator to slow down in order to avoid detection."

Sneaky, fellas, just plain sneaky.

The Yellowhead What!? Come Off It

Fighting words from astrologer and naturalist Dr. Jeremy Tatum of the University of Victoria.

He says the B.C. fish and wildlife branch is all wet when it comes to natural history and is in over its neck when it talks about raising the level of Thetis Lake.

(The raising project would supposedly help cutthroat trout in Craigflower Creek).

Wildlife official Chris Dodd defended the project, saying among other things that it would benefit the yellowhead blackbird which nests around the lake.

Harrumph! snorts Tatum, the yellowhead blackbird does not in fact occur here on Vancouver island.

If that's the kind of reasoning behind the lake-raising proposal, says Tatum, it's time an ecological study was carried out before anyone does anything to the lake.

"It is evident," says Tatum, "that the government officials do not know a yellowhead blackbird from a hole in the ground."

Uncertainty over government funding has forced members of the Handicapped Action Committee to launch a fund-raising campaign in the community.

Spokesperson Ellie Bowerman says the group is concentrating on churches and service clubs and hopes to raise enough pledges to cover the $200-a-month rent for the committee's office at 521-620 View.

Ellie says the pitch is being made personally by committee members. None of that appeal-by-mail approach for them.

She says the group will seek advice from Housing Minister Hugh Curtis on how to get further funding.

The appointment of Martin O'Connell as labor minister in the Trudeau cabinet last week brought reminiscences about his family's early ties with Victoria. Some oldtimers may remember the O'Connell family growing up at Killarney Cottage on Glanford Avenue.

The house — his father was from Killarney, Ireland, and Mrs. O'Connell was of Irish descent from Ontario — is still there.

O'Connell grew up in Saanich and went to Mount View High, later served in the Second World War and came back to study to be a teacher. Before he went into politics back east, he was on the faculty of the University of Toronto.

He has a brother, Monsignor Michael O'Connell, who is known locally for his work with Bishop Remi De Roo, and two sisters, none of whom live in the Victoria area anymore.

TOWN TALK

Maybe the Gulf Islanders are better with the tongue-twisters, particularly after a night of the bubbly.

But regional district executive director Dennis Young — stone sober — recently had some trouble pronouncing the name of the inn at Port Browning on North Pender Island.

It's the SH-QU-ALA.

The inn asked for — and received — agreement from the board to to tell the Liquor Administration Branch that it favors allowing the inn to extend its hours from 11:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays.

Said regional board chairman Jim Campbell, "It's easier to pronounce at 11 p.m."

Kids at Hampton elementary returned to school Monday to discover their contribution to a Burnside-Tillicum Neighborhood Improvement Project had been virtually uprooted over the weekend.

Algerian Leader Dying

ALGIERS (AP) — A leading Swedish scientist has returned home after advising Algerian leaders that President Houari Boumedienne is dying of a rare disease and nothing can be done to save him, diplomatic sources reported today.

The diplomats said Prof. Jan Waldénstroem told the Algerians if the 53-year-old president survives the next few days, his system will gradually deteriorate.

Boumedienne, who has dominated Algeria since his military coup 13 years ago, is suffering from a disease discovered by Waldenstroem and named after him.

It is a malignancy of the lymph glands that results in disintegration of bone marrow, kidney failure and disintegration of the circulatory and digestive systems.

Waldenstroem, 72, came to Algiers at the request of the government and confirmed an earlier diagnosis that Boumedienne is suffering from the disease in its most malignant form.

More than 40 specialists from 12 nations have been trying to prolong the president's life.

The government-controlled media carried optimistic reports Monday, but one official said: "It is merely a question of time."

Informed sources said Boumedienne could be kept alive for weeks by survival machines, but he was not expected to regain his faculties or physical strength.

Although several members of the leadership council are considered potential successors, there is no heir apparent to Boumedienne.

The front runners include Foreign Minister Abdulaziz Bouteflik , 41, and Mohamed Salah Yahiaoui, 46, administrator of the National Liberation Front, the only legal party.

Boumedienne, a military commander who ousted President Ahmed Ben Bella in 1965, became a prominent Third World political figure during his presidency and his successor is expected to continue his policies.

He is considered one of the developing nations' most militant leftists and "anti-imperialists" although he maintains economic ties with France, the United States and other Western nations.

San Francsico: Crazytown-by-the-Pacific

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — In the chilly, beautiful city that has inspired song and poetry, grief hung like fog today amid a plague of bizarre violence that led residents to ask: "Why does it happen here?"

"I feel so sorry for this city," said a citizen shaken by the murder Monday of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk. "We've had the Zebra killers, the Zodiac, the SLA, the Peoples Temple and now this. I don't know how much more we can take."

The tearful throng of 25,000 to 40,000 residents who gathered in shock outside city hall Monday night tried to provide their own answer. Carrying candles and clinging to their neighbors like survivors of some natural catastrophe or a war, they sang We Shall Overcome.

"This is every misfit's favorite city as well as the favorite city of a lot of straight, normal people," said Reg Murphy, editor and publisher of The Examiner.

"It's the most photogenic city in the country," he said. "It's also the most accepting city. It contains some of the brightest minds in America. . . But there's an odd mixture of the highly intellectual community and the crazy community."

The "crazy community" bloomed in the 1960s. Long-haired young people calling themselves hippies and flower children swarmed into San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury district.

They were turned off by the Vietnam war and turned on by the prophet of LSD, Timothy Leary.

The flower children were hallucinating on drugs. "We were riding on the wind," one of them would remember. Her name was Lynette (Squeaky) Fromme. Years later, she would try to kill a president.

She came to San Francisco with the Charles Manson family in 1968. Manson had passed through Haight Ashbury earlier, staying long enough to learn the power of drugs and the word love. He took his group to Los Angeles and ordered mass murders.

In Haight Ashbury, teenagers "freaked out" screaming in the agony of LSD "bad trips."

Some died after taking street drugs laced with strychnine. Some committed murder. Those who survived drifted to drug rehabilitation centers or moved away.

But the plague they had brought did not die. It festered and burst in the '70s, San Francisco's most violent decade since the days of the Barbary Coast.

In 1969 and 1970, a murderer calling himself Zodiac sent grisly coded messages to local newspapers.

"Killing people is more fun than killing wild game," he wrote.

Zodiac's missives have continued sporadically. He has not been caught. Police say he probably killed six persons. He boasts of slaying 37 victims.

In 1972, a midwestern preacher, Rev. Jim Jones set up his Peoples Temple in San Francisco's poor Fillmore district.

In 1973, a wave of random street killings terrorized the city. The Zebra killers struck without warning, killing whites at night. Most victims were shot. One was raped, another beheaded.

In April 1974, four young Black Muslims were arrested and charged with 14 murders, seven assaults, one rape and an attempted kidnapping. The Zebra murderers were convicted in 1976 after the longest trial in San Francisco history.

On Feb.4, 1974, Patricia Hearst, daughter of one of San Francisco's first families, was kidnapped. Her travels through the radical underground exposed a seething subculture of disaffected young revolutionaries known as The Symbionese Liberation Army.

Six of them died that spring in a flaming, suicidal shootout with Los Angeles police. The others—Miss Hearst and William and Emily Harris—drifted back to San Francisco where they eluded police for 18 months before their capture Sept. 18, 1975.

Also that September, Lynette Fromme aimed a gun at then-President Gerald Ford in nearby Sacramento and was arrested. Days later in San Francisco, a middle-aged radical, Sara Jane Moore, fired a gun at Ford, barely missing him.

"Isn't anything happening anywhere but San Francisco?" a newscaster asked.

In 1976, Hearst, Moore and Fromme went to prison. Radical groups such as The New World Liberation Front bombed buildings and issued communiques.

In 1977, the plague seemed to pass. City fathers remembered the town's old slogan, Everybody's Favorite City. The city's large homosexual population savored political victory—election of Harvey Milk, the first gay member of the city's Board of Supervisors.

The following year, 1978, was one of promise. Record numbers of tourists jammed cable cars.

Then, on Nov. 18, another nightmare began.

Democratic Congressman Leo Ryan, investigating the Peoples Temple cult, was shot and killed on an airstrip in Guyana. Three newsmen and a temple defector were slain with him.

Within hours, a horror story unfolded. Hundreds of San Franciscans who had followed Jones to a promised paradise in Guyana obeyed his command to commit mass suicide. In the deep jungle, troops found more than 900 bodies.

Jones had been appointed director of the housing authority by Moscone. Thus, when the 49-year-old mayor was gunned down in his office Monday morning, speculation stirred of Peoples Temple involvement. There was none, police said. It was much simpler.

A disgruntled former supervisor, Dan White, was booked for investigation of murder. He had come to City Hall to seek reinstatement as a supervisor. Moscone had refused.

"I don't know how we're going to put this city back together again," said the citizen who called a late-night radio talk show to mourn for San Francisco.

Dockers End Strike

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — A strike by dock workers that virtually paralysed Indian ports for 11 days ended Monday, the Press Trust of India news agency reported.

Leaders of the All India Port and Dock Workers Federation agreed to a government appeal to call off the strike.

The port workers' demands a higher cost-of-living allowance.

CATANIA, Sicily (Reuter) — Mount Etna, Europe's largest active volcano, has erupted with jets of red-hot lava spewing 500 metres above its cone-shaped summit.

HANDICAPPED SHOP TONIGHT

The ninth annual shopping party for handicapped adults and children will be held at Woodward's starting at 6 tonight.

About 1,000 adults and 50 children are expected to participate in the carol singing and shopping, said advertising and promotion manager Wilf Dick.

Woodward's employees will donate their time to act as guides for the blind and to push wheelchairs.

The Salvation Army will serve refreshments.

The singalong program will include old favorites as well as Christmas carols.

Santa Claus will hand out bags of oranges and candy.

A free photo posing with Santa will be given to each participant.

The idea was brought to Victoria by former Woodward's employee Tom Farrell who saw a department store in England doing it.

With the success of the Victoria program, other Woodward's stores began to copy the idea. Farrell will be at the store to participate in tonight's program.

Freight elevators will be available for those who cannot use the store's escalators.

Illness Your Own Fault: City Doctor

KAMLOOPS (CP) — If you are ill with cancer, heart disease or arthritis, it could be your own fault, says a doctor with the Victoria Holistic Health Centre.

Dr. Ron Puhky said most degenerative diseases killing and maiming Canadians could be prevented through improved lifestyles.

"You can't go to a doctor and say 'make me well.' You've got to do it yourself," said Puhky.

He cited statistics showing 80 per cent of Canadians are physically inactive and 50 per cent are obese. Combined with the high incidence of smoking and stress, unnecessary deaths from degenerative disease are on the rise, said the doctor.

"Eighty-five per cent of all deaths from heart disease are preventable if people would lose weight, lower their cholesterol levels, stop smoking, lower blood pressure and get more exercise."

Puhky criticized the western medical system, which he said emphasizes treatment after the body has been damaged. While in medical school at McGill University, he said he was never given a single lecture on nutrition.

Puhky, here to conduct a weekend workshop in preventive medicine, said he knows of only 40 physicians in British Columbia who strongly stress prevention in health care.

"I can't compete with companies who spend millions of dollars telling people to smoke cigarettes and eat their crappy food."

Cabinet Study Of Bendrodt Case Delayed

The provincial cabinet will wait until next Monday before studying the transcript of the Judicial Council of B.C.'s inquiry into provincial court Judge Erik Bendrodt.

The cabinet was scheduled to deal with the council's recommendations at its regular weekly meeting Thursday, but the meeting has been cancelled because Premier Bill Bennett and five of his ministers are in Ottawa for a first ministers' conference. Several other ministers are out of town.

During the inquiry earlier this month, Bendrodt admitted to being an alcoholic and to having picked up a teen-aged prostitute.

The council said the judge's actions were regrettable, but questioned whether he should be removed from the bench for a single moral lapse, and recommended no further action be taken.

Several cabinet ministers have already said they are dissatisfied with the council's recommendation.

Woman Charged In Farris Probe

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver woman, believed to be linked to the resignation of the former chief justice of British Columbia through a notebook found in a high-class bawdy house, appeared in provincial court Monday.

Wendy King, 30, was remanded until Dec. 11 on a charge of keeping a common bawdy house. Charged with the same offense is Raymond Yuen, also known as Raymond Young, who lived in the same West End apartment as King.

John Farris resigned as chief justice earlier this month following reports that police found his name in a notebook when they raided a suspected bawdy house in the West End.

The federal justice department is conducting an investigation into Farris' activities while chief justice.

King returned to Canada from the United States and surrendered to police Sunday, four days after she was charged.

She said in a television interview that police seized several bags of material from her apartment, but she had no notebook in the suite.

MDA Charges Stick

NANAIMO (CP) — Raymond Ridge, 31, of Ladysmith was found guilty Monday by a county court jury of conspiring to traffic in MDA hydrochloride and of two counts of trafficking in the drug. Judge Peter Millward will sentence Ridge Dec. 20. The charges were laid after three pounds of MDA were seized in 1977.
